Plan To Assist Little Business Aired at Hearing

Reserve Banks May Be Given Greater Leeway in Making Loans

HOPKINS IN FAVOR OF FEDERAL HELP

Believed Government Should Provide Funds for Industry

Washington, June 2. (AP)—A new plan for helping little business with federal reserve loans was announced in part, today amid intensified discussions of ways and means of stimulating industrial expansion.

Before a Senate sub-committee on banking, Erest G. Draper, a member of the reserve system's board of governors, disclosed that a request would be made for legislation giving the reserve banks much greater leeway to meet the credit needs of the "small businessman".

Meanwhile, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins gave his emphatic backing to the thesis repeatedly expressed by inner-circle new dealers recently—that the government should provide funds for industry because it can't be done by private capital at this time."

Eccles To Reveal Plans

Draper told the committee that the proposal for loans to little business would be described in detail by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the reserve board when he appears before the sub-committee Monday. However, he let this much of the Nan out of the bag:

The reserve banks at present are restricted to five-year loans to provide "working capital to businesses that are established."

Under a change in the law, he said, the reserve system could extend "additional credit facilities to small business on a much more liberal and flexible basis" than is possible at present.

Draper made it clear that in his opinion such a plan should supple-

British Soldiers Clash with Arabs In the Holy Land

Several Known Dead on Both Sides in Major Engagement

Jerusalem, June 2 (AP) — British troops were reported tonight to be fighting a major engagement in the Kalkaliya hills with an Arab band in a new wave of bloodshed swept the Holy Land.

The Arab band during the day killed four British soldiers and three Jewish policemen who were on a road patrol.

In addition six Arabs were killed, including a native policeman, when a time bomb exploded in a market place near the Jaffa Gate. The bomb burst amid shopping crowd. A score of Arabs were wounded so seriously they were taken to hospitals.

Horror gripped the Holy Land in the wake of the outburst. Tension grew hourly as police and military authorities strove to retain order by swift punitive measures and with ceaseless patrols in all sections of Jerusalem.

The Arab band wiped out the road patrol of four Britons and three Jews 35 miles northwest of Jerusalem and seized a machine-gun and other arms.

After the blast at Jerusalem's Jaffa Gate Arabs stoned Jewish traffic in the Arab-Jewish quarter, and then authorities suspended three Arab bus lines. Seven Jewish bus lines already had been suspended.

Guards about all public buildings were doubled and the public services were watched carefully.

The Jerusalem Community Council issued a manifesto to Jews proclaiming regret and horror over the death of innocent persons in Jerusalem and demanding restraint of all Jews in their battle against the new British policy for an independent Palestine state with the Jews as a minority.

Manton Testifies - He Helped Friend Borrow $250,000

Former Judge Completes His Cross-Examination at Trial

QUESTIONED ABOUT FINANCIAL DEALS

Defense Rests Shortly After His Testimony is Completed

New York, June 2. (AP)—Former U. S. Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton's cross-examination ended late today shortly after he testified he had helped a friend get a $250,000 loan from Lord and Thomas, advertising agency, during litigation involving one of the firm's clients.

The defense rested its case a little later.

U. S. Attorney John T. Cahill, prosecuting the ex-jurist on a charge that he conspired to sell judicial decisions, referred to the Lord and Thomas loan after an extensive interrogation of Manton's various financial transactions.

The loan, Manton said, was made in 1932 to James J. Sullivan, an officer in a Manton Real Estate Company, the Forest Hills Terrace Corp.

At the time there was pending before the U. S. Circuit court an appeal of a case brought against the American Tobacco Company's president, George Washington Hill, over distribution of bonuses of $10,000,000.

First Sought $25,000

Cahill elicited the fact that Manton approached Louis Levy, member of the law firm representing the tobacco company, and asked if he knew where Sullivan could borrow $25,000.

James M. Noonan, chief counsel for Manton, objected to the line of questioning, but Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut permitted Cahill to proceed to bring out the fact that Sullivan obtained a loan ten times greater than originally mentioned.

In the following month, he further brought out, a decision in favor of the American Tobacco Company was handed down in Circuit Court.

Manton said most of the money went to his corporations.

After members of the Circuit Court of Appeals, his former associates, testified in his behalf, Manton was recalled for redirect examination and submitted explanations of the series of loans in which he or his corporations had been involved.

On re-cross examination he testified that Thomas E. Murray, Jr., whom he appointed receiver for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in August, 1932, had previous-

Wife Sees Husband And Two Sons Drown

St. Cloud, Minn., June 2 (AP) — While his wife looked on, helpless, Norris Moore was drowned in the Mississippi river today in a futile effort to save his two sons and a third boy.

The other victims were Leroy Moore, about 17, Wayne, about 12, and Ralph Wruck. The tragedy occurred during a rural school picnic. Two of the boys stepped off a drop-off while wading. The third was swept by the current when he tried to help them. The father suffered a similar fate.

Byrd Wants Expedition Sent To Protect Rights at the North Pole

Washington, June 2 (AP)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, conqueror of two poles, told a House appropriations subcommittee today that a government expedition should be sent to the antarctic continent early next fall "to protect this nation's rights."

President Roosevelt asked Congress last week to appropriate $340,000 for an expedition, to be made under the supervision of Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, director of the interior department's territorial division.

After hearing Byrd, the sub-committee approved the president's request. Chairman Woodrum (D-Va), said it would be rushed to the House in a separate measure as soon as possible 'because they are in a hurry for it."

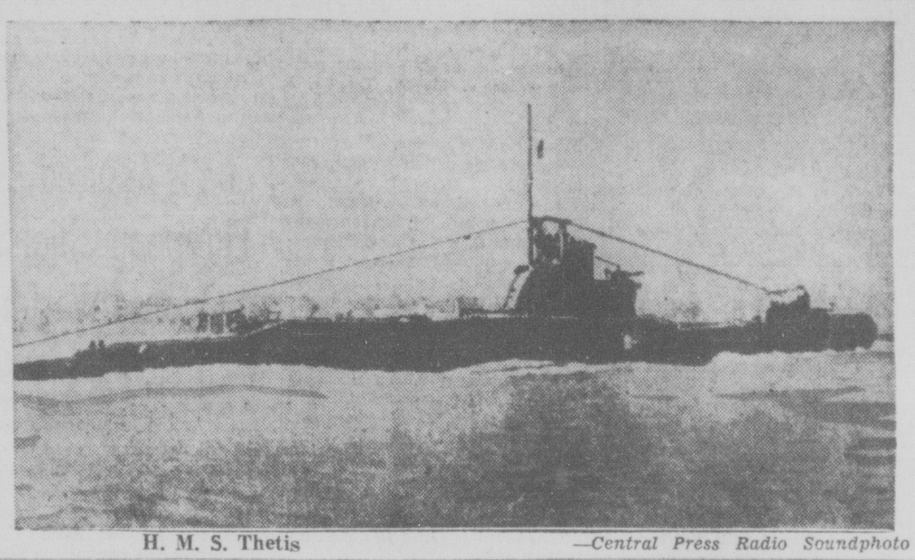

Although the admiral testified at a closed session, informed sources said he told Chairman Woodrum (D-Va) of the subcommittee that the U. S. should act quickly to protect its mineral rights in the ant-Arctic.

He suggested also that the continent some day might prove to be of strategic naval importance, particularly in connection with the operation of commercial and naval aircraft in the southern Pacific.

Although scientists have not yet determined what natural resources lie beneath the vast ice cap that covers most of the antArctic re-

Chamber Backing Morgenthau's New Income Tax Plans

Program of Secretary of Treasury Supported by Alvord

Washington, June 2 (AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce, approving in general "the objectives and the program" of treasury secretary Morgenthau, proposed to Congress today that a flat 15 percent tax on the income of corporations be substituted for present graduated levies.

Under the plan, presented to the house ways and means committee by Ellsworth C. Alvord, the first $2,000 of income would be exempted from tax. This, he asserted, was designed as an aid to small business.

Alvord, vice chairman of the chamber's committee on federal finance, submitted "for immediate action" a nine-point program, including the flat corporate tax and repeal of what remains of the undistributed profits levy.

Offers 10-Point Program

He also proposed a 10-point long range program of tax revision which he urged the committee to study between now and the next session of Congress. His first item of this second program was a recommendation that Congress lay down a system of basic tax principles not to be changed for a period of years, so concerns may plan for the future with knowledge of what they have to expect in the way of taxes.

The chamber proposal for flattening ot present corporate income tax rates to 15 percent compares with that of Chairman Harrison (D-Miss) of the Senate Finance Committee for a levy of about 18 percent.

The present tax ranges from 12½ to 16 percent on the first $25,000 of the corporation income. Corporations with income over $25,000 are subject to the undistributed profits tax, which is 16½ percent if all profits are disbursed as dividends to stockholders and 19 percent if all profits are retained in the corporate treasury. Partial disbursements are assessed rates ranging between 16½ and 19 percent.

May Reject Program

Indications were that at least part of the chamber's program would be rejected, for this session of Congress.

House Committee Votes To Boost Age Assistance to $20 a Month

Changes in Social Security Law Favored by Large Majority

Washington, June 2 (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, finishing work tonight on proposed changes in the social security law, voted to increase the maximum for federal old age assistance from $15 to $20 a month.

This assistance is matched dollar-for-dollar with state funds, so that states may obtain the maximum only by providing $20 themselves, in which case beneficiaries would receive $40 a month plus any sum above $20 which the states provide.

(Old age assistance payments, which go to needy persons, are distinct from old age pensions, which are financed by taxes on employers and employes.)

Since few states now meet the present $15 maximum, the cost of the change approved today was not expected to be great. Representative Cooper (D-Tenn), a committee member, estimated the cost would be $5,000,000 or less, on the basis of present state assistance laws.

Representative Dingell (D-Mich), who proposed the change, said the committee adopted it by an "overwhelming" vote.

The committee also has voted to freeze the old age pension tax at 1 percent on both employes and employers for the next three years. Unless this proposed change becomes law, the rate will advance to 1½ percent for both employes and employers on Jan. 1, 1940.

Rev. McClelland Is Made Bishop

Easton, Md., June 2 (AP)—The Rev. William McClelland became the fourth Protestant Episcopal bishop of Easton today in the church's traditionally beautiful services marked by a fervent plea for spiritual leadership out of worldwide chaos.

The plea rang out through Christ Church as the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington, told the 400 laymen and clergymen attending the services that spiritual leadership which "transcends every other forms of leadership is what our age sorely needs."

"It is strict adherance to the truths of the gospel in which our security lies," Bishop Freeman said. "There is nothing in the situation today that should do other than quicken our zeal for more complete and utter consecration."

The bishop concluded his sermon with the prediction that "we shall recover any ground we have lost and contributed to the restoration of tranquility and peace."

Briggs Strikers and Company Far Apart

Detroit, June 2 (AP)—Negotiations for settlement of the 12-days old Briggs Manufacturing Co., strike were adjourned late today with union and management described as "far apart."

James F. Dewey, federal conciliator who has been trying to bring about a truce, had expressed hope a compromise would permit 70,000 idle workers to return to their jobs.

Steals Baby To Make Sweetheart Propose Marriage

Unwed Mother Relates to Police Reason for Abduction

Philadelphia, June 2 L—A young woman related tearfully to police today that she stole a baby—recovered after an overnight search — and told her sweetheart the child was theirs so he would marry her.

She said their own son died four days after birth.

The child she substituted, five-month-old Gerald McCrohan, was snatched from his carriage on a busy street yesterday while his mother shopped.

Police found the boy unharmed, this morning and took into custody Beatrice Wood, 21, and Frederick Bauers, 23. The woman was held on abduction charge, but the man was released when he said he had believed the child was theirs.

Gerald's parents, John and Margaret McCrohan, cried "thank God he's safe" when they saw their son again. Then Mrs. McCrohan fainted.

She had listed in a public appeal for the baby's safe return ingredients of a feeding formula she implored the abductor to use because of Gerald's "delicate health". The formula included lime water.

Detectives George Myers and Harold Simmons went on a round of drug stores to inquire about recent purchases of lime water. In one of the stores Myers glimpsed a blonde woman who aroused his suspicions. At the same time, Simmons saw a man sitting on a park bench with a baby sprawled awkwardly across his lap.

The detectives took the couple and child to a station house, where Miss Wood sobbed out this story:

"I was walking along and saw this baby lying in the coach, x x x I thought how pleased Fred would be if I could show him this child and tell him it was ours. I had stalled Fred several times when he asked to see the child who died. x x x I didn't realize what I was doing to the child's family. So I picked him up and x x x went out and met Fred and made arrangements for a date this morning so I could show the baby to him."

Madeleine Carroll Will Seek Divorce

Hollywood, June 2 (AP) — Blonde Madeleine Carroll, at work on the picture "Are Husbands Necessary," said tonight she would seek a divorce from Capt. Philip Astley, wealthy London real estate broker whom she married in 1931.

"I regret deeply it is necessary for me to take this action," the actress asserted. "Our marriage has not been one in fact since I came to the United States three years ago."

Generally regarded as one of the most beautiful women in motion pictures, Miss Carroll also is one of the colony's most astute businesswomen. She owns many real estate properties in London, homes on the Riviera and in Spain and an apartment building in New York.

Royal Visitors Leave Mountains After Short Rest

Arrive in Edmonton from Jasper National Park

Edmonton, Alberta, June 2 (AP) — King George VI and Queen Elizabeth came back to the prairies and the crowds today from the mountains where they had one of the happiest days of their lives.

The royal visitors arrived in Edmonton late in the afternoon after a six-hour ride aboard their royal train from Jasper National Park, refreshed and rested by their 24 hour stop.

In contrast to the quiet they had just left, the king and queen were greeted with a tremendous ovation in this bustling gateway to the vast Canadian northlands.

Only six hours were alloted on the schedule for the Edmonton visit, but civic and provincial authorities of the Alberta capital crowded something into every minute.

For 24 hours at Jasper they lived as any couple would live, spending most of the time out of doors, on easy mountain climbs clambering over a glacier, camera hunting and winding up the day at their own fireside.

Edmonton was the most northerly point of the royal tour, and here the king and queen sensed the arctic in the program and the sights before them.

Portage avenue through which they moved with 68,000 persons cheering from bleachers is itself an airfield, a wide-open space untouched by tangles of wires or obstacles of any kind.

At the conclusion of their ride through the city and king and

British Navy Speeds Move To Raise Ship

Hope for Trapped Men Revived after Admiralty and Builders of Ship Believe All Are Dead; Cause of Sinking Remains Mystery; Four Escape in Davis Lung, but Several Others Die in Making Attempt to Reach Surface

Birkenhead, England, June 3 — (Saturday) (AP) — Despite abandonment of hope by builders of the submarine Thetis, the admiralty announced today that divers reported faint tappings on the hull of the vessel in which 90 men are entrapped.

The tappings were heard at 2:00 A. M. (8 P. M., E. S. T. Friday), the admiralty said.

As a consequence of these faint signs of life, the admiralty directed a vast array of rescue ships to push forward their operations throughout the night in attempts to raise the stern of the craft "when slack water provides the next opportunity."

Builders Gave Up Hope

The builders of the vessel had given up for dead the men aboard her. It had been estimated that at the expiration of 36 hours under water—20 minutes before the tappings were reported heard—the air supply would be exhausted.

Low tide was not expected until 6 A. M., and this would be more than four hours beyond the 36-hour deadline.

The admiralty announcement said:

"The admiralty stated that divers reported at 2 A. M., that they heard faint tappings in the submarine.

"Salvage operations are proceeding and a further attempt will be made to raise the stern when slack water provides the next opportunity."

Earlier a naval officer arriving at Liverpool hospital with one of the four survivors of the accident had said that salvage would be deferred until dawn and that hope had been abandoned by squads of workers as well as the submarine builders.

Ambulance squad workers were dismissed and pier lights were ex-

Blind Man Saves Wife from Flames

Easton, Md., June 2 (AP)—Groping his sightless way into the flaming kitchen of his home, J. D. Ford, blind and a semi-invalid, rescued his wife today from a fire that destroyed their house and spread to two nearby residences.

Both Ford and his wife were seriously injured, Ford suffering severe head burns and Mrs. Ford burns on the face, head and body. She was confined tonight in the hospital here.

Tragedy struck the Ford's home at Newcomb, small community five miles from here, as Mrs. Ford was preparing breakfast.

Ford was in another part of the house, he told firemen, when an explosion rocked the kitchen. He felt his way into that room, walking through the crackling flames that had ignited the floor and walls until he stumbled over his wife's body.

He dragged her to outdoors and safety as the flames, which started from an explosion of a kerosene stove, spread through the home.

By the time volunteer firemen from Easton and St. Michaels reached the scene the blaze had ignited the next-door residence of Gus Gilman and in a few minutes another house, owned by James Newnam, was burning.

The Ford home was destroyed, the interior of Gilman's house badly burned and the walls and roof of Newnam's home were damaged.

Firemen pumped water from nearby Oak Creek to fight the blaze.

Multimillionaire Woman Indicted as Smuggler

New York, June 2 (AP)—Mrs. May Hancock Ayer, multimillionaire society woman, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on charges of smuggling goods into this country.

The indictment said she failed to declare certain articles and also "facilitated the transportation and concealment of smuggled goods." Federal agents recently raided her apartment and carried away expensive Parisian clothing and jewelry.

Mrs. Ayers is the widow of Dr. James C. Ayers, who left her more than $20,000,000.

Murphy Indorses Move To Restrict Industrial Police

Says Such Legislation Is Needed To Insure Industrial Peace

Washington, June 2 (AP) — Legislation to restrict the activities of industrial police and forbid the use of labor spies and strikebreakers won a hearty indorsement today from Attorney General Frank Murphy.

In testimony before a Senate labor subcommittee, Murphy expressed the opinion that some such legislation was "greatly needed" to insure industrial peace. Senators LaFollette (Prog-Wis) and Thomas (D-Utah), members of the subcommittee, are authors of the bill.

Byrl A. Whitney, director of the educational and research bureau of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, asserted the bill should be enacted to safeguard the civil liberties of the nation's workers.

Murphy sounded a note of caution about a proposal in the bill to make available to employers the identification records of the department of justice so that they could determine whether an applicant for a guard's job had a criminal record.

"It has been our policy to keep these identification records confidential and to change this policy might be detrimental to the best interests of law enforcement," he said. He told reporters later, however, he believed some system of making the records available through official sources might be worked out.

Murphy said he wanted to indorse particularly a section of the bill which would prohibit armed private police from leaving the property of the employer in carrying out their duties. He said testimony obtained by the Civil Liberties Committee concerning the activities of some such police in the "little steel" strike of 1937 had demonstrated the need for such legislation.

The bill also would forbid private police to use tear gas

Navy Divers Escape Death Working On Salvage of Submarine Squalus

Portsmouth, N. H., June 2 (AP)—Three navy divers escaped uninjured today and a fourth was "lost" on the bottom for a time as minor mishaps and disappointments marred the start of the second week of salvage operations on the sunken submarine Squalus.

One man, John Sibitzky, first to reach the sub's deck last week after her sinking, lost his footing in a tidal current, was swept over the side and fell 15 or 20 feet to the muddy bottom. He "floated" himself back up by shutting off his air discharge valve, and "bouncing" back to the deck, he reported.

Lost for a time was R. J. Agness, who fouled his lines during the descent. By the time he relocated his destination on the submarine deck, navy men said the time limit for his dive had expired and he was recalled to the surface.

The other two mishaps struck at divers Roland Fielder and H. W. Ross, who had identical accidents. In rising to the surface, their suits filled with air at the 90-foot depth, shooting them to the top.

Attendants on the deck of the rescue ship Falcon lowered both to the 90-foot level, brought them up again through the gradual ten-foot steps of decompression.

"With good luck," said officials directing the salvage, "we expect to begin tunnelling to clear a path to the propeller struts of the submarine early next week."

Manton Testifies He Helped Friend Borrow $250,000

Former Judge Completes His Cross-Examination at Trial

Defense Rests Shortly After His Testimony is Completed

New York, June 2. (AP)—Former U. S. Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton's cross-examination ended late today shortly after he testified he had helped a friend get a $250,000 loan from Lord and Thomas, advertising agency, during litigation involving one of the firm's clients.

The defense rested its case a little later.

U. S. Attorney John T. Cahill, prosecuting the ex-jurist on a charge that he conspired to sell judicial decisions, referred to the Lord and Thomas loan after an extensive interrogation of Manton's various financial transactions.

The loan, Manton said, was made in 1932 to James J. Sullivan, an officer in a Manton Real Estate Company, the Forest Hills Terrace Corp.

At the time there was pending before the U. S. Circuit court an appeal of a case brought against the American Tobacco Company's president, George Washington Hill, over distribution of bonuses of $10,000,000.

First Sought $25,000

Cahill elicited the fact that Manton approached Louis Levy, member of the law firm representing the tobacco company, and asked if he knew where Sullivan could borrow $25,000.

James M. Noonan, chief counsel for Manton, objected to the line of questioning, but Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut permitted Cahill to proceed to bring out the fact that Sullivan obtained a loan ten times greater than originally mentioned.

In the following month, he further brought out, a decision in favor of the American Tobacco Company was handed down in Circuit Court.

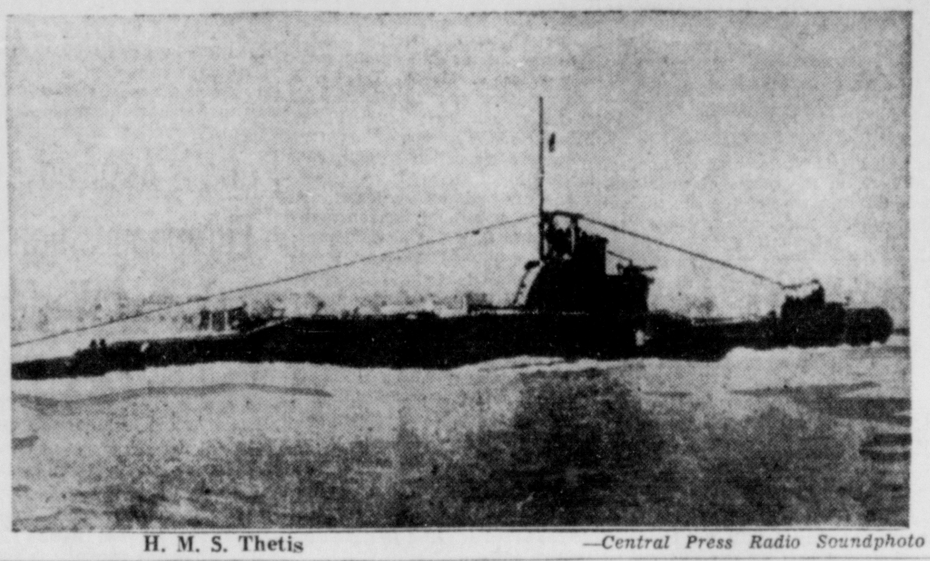

Manton said most of the money went to his corporations.

After members of the Circuit Court of Appeals, his former associates, testified in his behalf, Manton was recalled for redirect examination and submitted explanations of the series of loans in which he or his corporations had been involved.

On re-cross examination he testified that Thomas E. Murray, Jr., whom he appointed receiver for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in August, 1932, had previous-

Chamber Backing Morgenthau's New Income Tax Plans

Program of Secretary of Treasury Supported by Alvord

Washington, June 2 (AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce, approving in general "the objectives and the program" of treasury secretary Morgenthau, proposed to Congress today that a flat 15 percent tax on the income of corporations be substituted for present graduated levies.

Under the plan, presented to the house ways and means committee by Ellsworth C. Alvord, the first $2,000 of income would be exempted from tax. This, he asserted, was designed as an aid to small business.

Alvord, vice chairman of the chamber's committee on federal finance, submitted "for immediate action" a nine-point program, including the flat corporate tax and repeal of what remains of the undistributed profits levy.

Offers 10-Point Program

He also proposed a 10-point long range program of tax revision which he urged the committee to study between now and the next session of Congress. His first item of this second program was a recommendation that Congress lay down a system of basic tax principles not to be changed for a period of years, so concerns may plan for the future with knowledge of what they have to expect in the way of taxes.

The chamber proposal for flattening ot present corporate income tax rates to 15 percent compares with that of Chairman Harrison (D-Miss) of the Senate Finance Committee for a levy of about 18 percent.

The present tax ranges from 12½ to 16 percent on the first $25,000 of the corporation income. Corporations with income over $25,000 are subject to the undistributed profits tax, which is 16½ percent if all profits are disbursed as dividends to stockholders and 19 percent if all profits are retained in the corporate treasury. Partial disbursements are assessed rates ranging between 16½ and 19 percent.

May Reject Program

Indications were that at least part of the chamber's program would be rejected, for this session of Congress.

House Committee Votes To Boost Age Assistance to $20 a Month

Changes in Social Security Law Favored by Large Majority

Washington, June 2 (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, finishing work tonight on proposed changes in the social security law, voted to increase the maximum for federal old age assistance from $15 to $20 a month.

This assistance is matched dollar-for-dollar with state funds, so that states may obtain the maximum only by providing $20 themselves, in which case beneficiaries would receive $40 a month plus any sum above $20 which the states provide.

(Old age assistance payments, which go to needy persons, are distinct from old age pensions, which are financed by taxes on employers and employes.)

Since few states now meet the present $15 maximum, the cost of the change approved today was not expected to be great. Representative Cooper (D-Tenn), a committee member, estimated the cost would be $5,000,000 or less, on the basis of present state assistance laws.

Representative Dingell (D-Mich), who proposed the change, said the committee adopted it by an "overwhelming" vote.

The committee also has voted to freeze the old age pension tax at 1 percent on both employes and employers for the next three years. Unless this proposed change becomes law, the rate will advance to 1½ percent for both employes and employers on Jan. 1, 1940.

Arrive in Edmonton from Jasper National Park

Edmonton, Alberta, June 2 (AP) — King George VI and Queen Elizabeth came back to the prairies and the crowds today from the mountains where they had one of the happiest days of their lives.

The royal visitors arrived in Edmonton late in the afternoon after a six-hour ride aboard their royal train from Jasper National Park, refreshed and rested by their 24 hour stop.

In contrast to the quiet they had just left, the king and queen were greeted with a tremendous ovation in this bustling gateway to the vast Canadian northlands.

Only six hours were alloted on the schedule for the Edmonton visit, but civic and provincial authorities of the Alberta capital crowded something into every minute.

For 24 hours at Jasper they lived as any couple would live, spending most of the time out of doors, on easy mountain climbs clambering over a glacier, camera hunting and winding up the day at their own fireside.

Edmonton was the most northerly point of the royal tour, and here the king and queen sensed the arctic in the program and the sights before them.

Portage avenue through which they moved with 68,000 persons cheering from bleachers is itself an airfield, a wide-open space untouched by tangles of wires or obstacles of any kind.

At the conclusion of their ride through the city and king and

Blind Man Saves Wife from Flames

Easton, Md., June 2 (AP)—Groping his sightless way into the flaming kitchen of his home, J. D. Ford, blind and a semi-invalid, rescued his wife today from a fire that destroyed their house and spread to two nearby residences.

Both Ford and his wife were seriously injured, Ford suffering severe head burns and Mrs. Ford burns on the face, head and body. She was confined tonight in the hospital here.

Tragedy struck the Ford's home at Newcomb, small community five miles from here, as Mrs. Ford was preparing breakfast.

Ford was in another part of the house, he told firemen, when an explosion rocked the kitchen. He felt his way into that room, walking through the crackling flames that had ignited the floor and walls until he stumbled over his wife's body.

He dragged her to outdoors and safety as the flames, which started from an explosion of a kerosene stove, spread through the home.

By the time volunteer firemen from Easton and St. Michaels reached the scene the blaze had ignited the next-door residence of Gus Gilman and in a few minutes another house, owned by James Newnam, was burning.

The Ford home was destroyed, the interior of Gilman's house badly burned and the walls and roof of Newnam's home were damaged.

Firemen pumped water from nearby Oak Creek to fight the blaze.

British Soldiers Clash with Arabs In the Holy Land

Several Known Dead on Both Sides in Major Engagement

Jerusalem, June 2 (AP) — British troops were reported tonight to be fighting a major engagement in the Kalkaliya hills with an Arab band as a new wave of bloodshed swept the Holy Land.

The Arab band during the day killed four British soldiers and three Jewish policemen who were on a road patrol.

In addition six Arabs were killed, including a native policeman, when a time bomb exploded in a market place near the Jaffa Gate. The bomb burst amid shopping crowd. A score of Arabs were wounded so seriously they were taken to hospitals.

Horror gripped the Holy Land in the wake of the outburst. Tension grew hourly as police and military authorities strove to retain order by swift punitive measures and with ceaseless patrols in all sections of Jerusalem.

The Arab band wiped out the road patrol of four Britons and three Jews 35 miles northwest of Jerusalem and seized a machine-gun and other arms.

After the blast at Jerusalem's Jaffa Gate Arabs stoned Jewish traffic in the Arab-Jewish quarter, and then authorities suspended three Arab bus lines. Seven Jewish bus lines already had been suspended.

Guards about all public buildings were doubled and the public services were watched carefully.

The Jerusalem Community Council issued a manifesto to Jews proclaiming regret and horror over the death of innocent persons in Jerusalem and demanding restraint of all Jews in their battle against the new British policy for an independent Palestine state with the Jews as a minority.

Wife Sees Husband And Two Sons Drown

St. Cloud, Minn., June 2 (AP) — While his wife looked on, helpless, Norris Moore was drowned in the Mississippi river today in a futile effort to save his two sons and a third boy.

The other victims were Leroy Moore, about 17, Wayne, about 12, and Ralph Wruck. The tragedy occurred during a rural school picnic. Two of the boys stepped off a drop-off while wading. The third was swept by the current when he tried to help them. The father suffered a similar fate.

Rev. McClelland Is Made Bishop

Easton, Md., June 2 (AP)—The Rev. William McClelland became the fourth Protestant Episcopal bishop of Easton today in the church's traditionally beautiful services marked by a fervent plea for spiritual leadership out of worldwide chaos.

The plea rang out through Christ Church as the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington, told the 400 laymen and clergymen attending the services that spiritual leadership which "transcends every other forms of leadership is what our age sorely needs."

"It is strict adherance to the truths of the gospel in which our security lies," Bishop Freeman said. "There is nothing in the situation today that should do other than quicken our zeal for more complete and utter consecration."

The bishop concluded his sermon with the prediction that "we shall recover any ground we have lost and contributed to the restoration of tranquility and peace."

Madeleine Carroll Will Seek Divorce

Hollywood, June 2 (AP) — Blonde Madeleine Carroll, at work on the picture "Are Husbands Necessary," said tonight she would seek a divorce from Capt. Philip Astley, wealthy London real estate broker whom she married in 1931.

"I regret deeply it is necessary for me to take this action," the actress asserted. "Our marriage has not been one in fact since I came to the United States three years ago."

Generally regarded as one of the most beautiful women in motion pictures, Miss Carroll also is one of the colony's most astute businesswomen. She owns many real estate properties in London, homes on the Riviera and in Spain and an apartment building in New York.

Sally Haines and Bert Wheeler Divorced

Los Angeles, June 2 (AP)—Sally Haines obtained a divorce from Film Comedian Bert Wheeler today after testifying grief and worry prevented her sleeping and brought her to the verge of a nervous breakdown.

She quoted the actor as telling her "we should live our lives separately," and added that when Wheeler remained away from home until 4 o'clock in the morning, he told her, "I have been out pursuing my own pleasure."

Multimillionaire Woman Indicted as Smuggler

New York, June 2 (AP)—Mrs. May Hancock Ayer, multimillionaire society woman, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on charges of smuggling goods into this country.

The indictment said she failed to declare certain articles and also "facilitated the transportation and concealment of smuggled goods." Federal agents recently raided her apartment and carried away expensive Parisian clothing and jewelry.

Mrs. Ayers is the widow of Dr. James C. Ayers, who left her more than $20,000,000.

Murphy Indorses Move To Restrict Industrial Police

Says Such Legislation Is Needed To Insure Industrial Peace

Washington, June 2 (AP)—Legislation to restrict the activities of industrial police and forbid the use of labor spies and strikebreakers won a hearty indorsement today from Attorney General Frank Murphy.

In testimony before a Senate labor subcommittee, Murphy expressed the opinion that some such legislation was "greatly needed" to insure industrial peace. Senators LaFollette (Prog-Wis) and Thomas (D-Utah), members of the subcommittee, are authors of the bill.

Byrl A. Whitney, director of the educational and research bureau of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, asserted the bill should be enacted to safeguard the civil liberties of the nation's workers.

Murphy sounded a note of caution about a proposal in the bill to make available to employers the identification records of the department of justice so that they could determine whether an applicant for a guard's job had a criminal record.

"It has been our policy to keep these identification records confidential and to change this policy might be detrimental to the best interests of law enforcement," he said. He told reporters later, however, he believed some system of making the records available through official sources might be worked out.

Murphy said he wanted to indorse particularly a section of the bill which would prohibit armed private police from leaving the property of the employer in carrying out their duties. He said testimony obtained by the Civil Liberties Committee concerning the activities of some such police in the "little steel" strike of 1937 had demonstrated the need for such legislation.

The bill also would forbid private police to use tear gas

Byrd Wants Expedition Sent To Protect Rights at the North Pole

Washington, June 2 (AP)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, conqueror of two poles, told a House appropriations subcommittee today that a government expedition should be sent to the antarctic continent early next fall "to protect this nation's rights."

President Roosevelt asked Congress last week to appropriate $340,000 for an expedition, to be made under the supervision of Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, director of the interior department's territorial division.

After hearing Byrd, the sub-committee approved the president's request. Chairman Woodrum (D-Va), said it would be rushed to the House in a separate measure as soon as possible 'because they are in a hurry for it."

Although the admiral testified at a closed session, informed sources said he told Chairman Woodrum (D-Va) of the subcommittee that the U. S. should act quickly to protect its mineral rights in the ant-Arctic.

He suggested also that the continent some day might prove to be of strategic naval importance, particularly in connection with the operation of commercial and naval aircraft in the southern Pacific.

Although scientists have not yet determined what natural resources lie beneath the vast ice cap that covers most of the antArctic re-

Briggs Strikers and Company Far Apart

Detroit, June 2 (AP)—Negotiations for settlement of the 12-days old Briggs Manufacturing Co., strike were adjourned late today with union and management described as "far apart."

James F. Dewey, federal conciliator who has been trying to bring about a truce, had expressed hope a compromise would permit 70,000 idle workers to return to their jobs.

Navy Divers Escape Death Working On Salvage of Submarine Squalus

Portsmouth, N. H., June 2 (AP)—Three navy divers escaped uninjured today and a fourth was "lost" on the bottom for a time as minor mishaps and disappointments marred the start of the second week of salvage operations on the sunken submarine Squalus.

One man, John Sibitzky, first to reach the sub's deck last week after her sinking, lost his footing in a tidal current, was swept over the side and fell 15 or 20 feet to the muddy bottom. He "floated" himself back up by shutting off his air discharge valve, and "bouncing" back to the deck, he reported.

Lost for a time was R. J. Agness, who fouled his lines during the descent. By the time he relocated his destination on the submarine deck, navy men said the time limit for his dive had expired and he was recalled to the surface.

The other two mishaps struck at divers Roland Fielder and H. W. Ross, who had identical accidents. In rising to the surface, their suits filled with air at the 90-foot depth, shooting them to the top.

Attendants on the deck of the rescue ship Falcon lowered both to the 90-foot level, brought them up again through the gradual ten-foot steps of decompression.

"With good luck," said officials directing the salvage, "we expect to begin tunnelling to clear a path to the propeller struts of the submarine early next week."

Two Battleships, 22 Other Vessels Ordered by Navy

New Armada To Cost $350,000,000 Soon To Be Started

By EWARD E. BOMAR

Washington, June 2 (AP) — The Navy, making a tremendous spurt in the world race for sea power, placed orders today for two 45,000-ton battleships and 22 other vessels. The new armada is expected to cost $350,000,000.

Assistant Secretary Charles Edison indicated that a major purpose of this action, unprecedented since the World War, was to speed restoration of the five to three ratio of superiority over Japan in tonnage. This ratio was established in naval treaties, but the treaties are now defunct, and Edison told reporters today:

"To the best of our information, the margin is now only about five to four. Japan and Great Britain were building during the years when we were idle."

Order Work Started

Without waiting for funds to become available July 1, the start of a new fiscal year, the Navy ordered work started on 19 of the 23 ships for which Congress provided in the $773,000,000 appropriation bill President Roosevelt signed last week. The other five ships ordered today had been authorized previously.

Dividing the work between government and commercial shipyards, the Navy awarded the two battleships and 10 other vessels to Navy yards and let contracts for 12 craft to private builders. Almost as the awards were announced, the President signed a measure authorizing $54,000,000 worth of construction at naval shore bases. The bill virtually completed the Navy's legislative program for this session of Congress. Included in nearly 100 projects was a $8,485,000 drydock for Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, Pacific outpost.

"Good Sized" Navy

The Navy's order involved 159,800 tons which Edison said was "a good size navy" in itself. All but two seaplane tenders are combat ships.

Meanwhile Edison reported that work on 74 ships already started was "clicking".

In addition to saving time at the start, the Assistant Secretary said that by duplicating plans without sacrificing quality the time of building destroyers was reduced from 36 to 24 months.

Actual preliminary work has started, he added, on the cruisers and some other vessels.

Chamber Backing Morgenthau's New Income Tax Plans

Saturday, Alvord asserted, "we are very happy to endorse and approve x x x the objectives and the program of the secretary of the treasury."

However, the chamber representative made two exceptions to this endorsement. He said he did not know what Morgenthau meant by "a more equitable distribution of national income." Secondly, he objected to coupling a reduction in individual surtax rates with the taxation of future issues of federal, state and municipal securities.

Hitler Believed To Have Captured Yugoslavia Favor

Display of Might Said To Have Impressed Prince Paul

Berlin, June 2 (AP)—Informed Nazis expressed conviction tonight, after Regent Prince Paul of Yugoslavia had been shown a cross-section of Germany's military might, that his country would remain helpful to Berlin in the Balkans.

Britain and France, they asserted, would not be able to woo Yugoslavia into what Nazis charge is the plan of London and Paris to "encircle" the Rome-Berlin axis partner.

In the Nazi view, Prince Paul, head of Yugoslavia's regency during the minority of 15-year old King Peter, intends to maintain Belgrade's neutrality.

This was the meaning, they said, of his response to the toast at an elaborate state dinner Thursday night in which Reichsfuehrer Hitler pledged respect "for all time" for Yugoslavia's frontier with Germany.

The regent, here for a five-day state visit, replied with an expression of gratification that Germany "intends to recognize Yugoslavia's freedom and independence."

A neutral Yugoslavia aloof from British-French front and delivering 50 percent or more of her raw materials to Germany and another large percentage to Italy, it was said, is all that Germany wants.

The Fuehrer's references at the state banquet to Yugoslavia's "freedom and independence" and the permanence of the two nation's common frontier were cited as proof that Nazidom desires no more than that.

(At Nagykanizsa, Hungary, meanwhile, acts of violence involving Slovenes and Germans in northern Yugoslavia were described in reports filtering into Hungary through heavy censorship.

(They told of the wrecking of homes of Nazi Germans by Slovene nationalists and said clashes had occurred in many localities along Yugoslavia's frontier with Germany, an area within the pre-war Austro-Hungarian empire.)

Hitler appeared today to go out of his way to impress Prince Paul.

Barber Shop Quartet Going Strong in First National Convention

Tulsa, Okla., June 2 (AP) — The harmony was terrific as delegates thawed their pipes today at the first annual convention of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America.

And that sentimental tune, "I had a dream, dear," quivered under the fnitial tonsil twanging of the first 50 or so delegates to arrive. They hit it low and dreamy, high and sweet, fast and swingy trying to live up to the name and purpose of their organization.

"Honey," also came in for a thorough vocal mauling, with the "Kentucky" group closing strong.

Believes All Are Dead

"I am sorry but there is no hope for the men remaining in the submarine," an official of the Cammell Laird shipyard said brokenly to a crowd dotted with wives and relatives of the seamen and civilian occupants of the vessel.

Four of those who were in the vessel were saved through use of the Davis "lung" apparatus. Three others were said by a lifeboat crew to have perished in an attempt to follow the four to the surface.

While there was no official explanation of the accident, these were the salient facts of the disaster and attmpts to effect a reccue:

Search for the new vessel was started three hours after she submerged in a test dive preparatory to being turned over to the British admiralty;

At 7:50 A. M., Friday, the Thetis was discovered; a 265 foot vessel, she lay in 130 feet of water with 18 feet of the tail above water at a 45 degree angle;

The tail disappeared with a strong tide at dusk, Friday, and failed to reappear.

Up until late Friday the admiralty had expressed confidence that the men would be rescued. Before the stern went out of sight there had been attempts to cut holes to let out stale air and admit a fresh air supply to the entombed men. A hawser had been reported attached to the submarine in an effort to lift it up further. It snapped under the strain.

Admiralty Not Optimistic

Announcement of the Cammell Laird official that hope for the men had been given up took a step further a grave statement of the admiralty before midnight that hope was greatly diminished.

The announcements had no effect on the frantic yet apparently futile rescue operations being pressed forward by a huge force of naval vessels.

But to hundreds huddled in the shadow of the great cranes at the shipyards the Cammell Laird official's statement carried an air of finality.

Wives wept and were led away.

Members of a North Wales lifeboat crew which visited the chill, search-lighted scene returned with the story that three occupants of the Thetis had perished in attempting to follow to the surface the only four survivors.

Their narrative suggested that others died desperately in trying to save themselves with the Davis "lung" apparatus.

Never before, said the lifeboat men, had they seen such a heartrending drama.

"We have never felt so helpless," said one who often had participated in rescues in turbulent seas.

Early in the evening they went to the scene, carrying doctors in their lifeboat—for hope had flamed in the afternoon when a portion of the Thetis' stern was visible.

Spend Hours on Scene

"We were there for more than four and a half hours, and waited patiently, hoping some more would be able to get away from her," said Robin Williams, coxswain of the lifeboat.

"She did not reappear at low tide. Something—the strong tide had dislodged her from the mud bank in which she apparently stuck nose down, and the tide hitting against the stern pushed her down to the bed of the sea."

"There were rescue vessels of all kinds around, divers and admirals. As time went on the chances of rescue became more and more slender. We could do nothing, of course, and when we came away no more had left the submarine."

It had been a dramatic day of agony in which the high spring tides had a major part.

The low early morning tide first made the stern visible. There was a rush of hope then that airlines might be attached by divers, that a hole might be made for escape from the hull, or, failing that, that navy "camels,"—buoyant cylinders of compressed air—might be attached to lift the craft entirely to the surface.

But at midnight all had been tried and all had been fruitless.

The tides dragged divers away from their objectives.

Every second that sped by cut into whatever margin of safety those under the water might have had. Ambulances with crisp, fresh sheets were at the dockside, just in case.

Eyes were strained into the sunset and shaded with the hands of shore watchers for some glimpse of the sharklike fin of the Thetis' stern which had given so much encouragement when it could be seen for nearly seven full hours.

No Diving Bells

Those on shore could guess fairly accurately why the rescue efforts were failing—they could see the tide and the deeping darkness. They were told that the British navy had no such diving bells as had saved 33 from the sunken submarine Squalus off Portsmouth, N. H., last week.

But no one had any clear-cut idea of just what happened Thursday afternoon when the shiny Thetis, a striking token of Britain's rearmament in a warlike world, became disabled in her diving test.

The four survivors—Capt. H. P. K. Oram, Lieut. H. G. Woods, chief stoker W. C. Arnold and F. Shaw, an employe of the builders—were closely guarded. There was not the slightest official light on what they told when they were picked up by the destroyer Brazen.

All that was permitted to seep from the official wall of secrecy was that the quartet had said their companions expected to follow them upward in the escape apparatus.

One authority said:

"It is obvious now that the fore part of the submarine is flooded, and the fact that no further members of the crew were rescued by the Davis escape apparatus suggested to experts that the water is now in the chamber below the aft escape hatch (from which the four had escaped).

"It is certain, after the rescue of the four men, that they were using the aft hatch. From the admiralty statement it appears that no other members of the crew could reach the chamber beneath it to be released to the surface."

Each time a man is released by the Davis "lung," a certain amount of water goes into the submarine, and the air supply is correspondingly reduced. The escaping man rises to the surface breathing oxygen through a special mask.

Although no one could say for certain why the Thetis plunged down into the mud of the shelflike bay, one supposition was that the forward torpedo tubes were flooded in the test dive.

Cause of Sinking Unknown

Whether water entered through the torpedo tubes being accidentally open during the diving or testing was the question asked by most experts.

The four survivors were reported to have said that all their companions were alive when the quartet began their ascent. From this, some experts reasoned that trouble in the forward torpedo tubes was the only possible answer, because if other sections were flooded it would have been impossible for all the crew to have kept alive in the first hours of the mishap.

The shipyard was tense when Woodward, shortly after midnight, made his statement that hope had been given up.

A crowd swarmed about him at the timekeeper's office when he appeared. It was there that many of the civilian workers and technicians who went down in the Thetis had often drawn their weekly pay.

"I must announce that the experiment of raising the Thetis' stern has not been successful," he began. Then he declared that there was no hope.

"The best thing you can do is to disperse and go home quietly," he concluded.

There was a minute or two of silence. Someone yelled: "where are your experts?" but he was silenced by those around him.

Kuhn Asserts He Is Innocent and Will Free Nation

Bund Head Declares Attempt Is Being Made To Destroy Him

New York, June 2. (AP)—Fritz Kuhn, national chieftain of the pro-Nazi German-American Bund, declared today that despite a "smearing campaign" designed "to morally destroy me," he would carry his "struggle against all subversive elements forward as never before until a truly free America again is achieved."

In a statement issued after his counsel had failed to obtain permission to examine minutes of the grand jury which indicted Kuhn recently for grand larceny and forgery, the Bund leader asserted his innocence and asked if the explanation of what he termed the "persecution" must "be looked for in the field of politics."

"Despite a long sequence of federal, state and municipal investigations and summary trumped-up court cases, nothing dishonorable, treasonable or in any way disloyal has been shown against the Bund, its sub-divisions, related organizations, or myself," he said.

Regarding the indictment, returned in connection with the alleged theft of $14,548.59 of Bund funds, Kuhn said all moneys collected and turned over to him "will be duly accounted for." He asserted he had not "spent a single cent of the Bund's money in any manner other than authorized by the national convention of the Bund."

It was indicated Kuhn probably would not be tried before fall.

Midshipmen Enroll On 3 Battleships

Annapolis, June 2 (AP)—Midshipmen today enrolled in a school with three battleships for classrooms and the Atlantic ocean for a text.

Twelve hundred midshipmen of the classes of 1940 and 1942 went aboard the New York, Texas and Arkansas for their annual three-month cruise.

Deserting the Naval Academy where they have studied the theory of navigation and marine engineering for nine months, the Middies will spend the summer gathering practical "dope" on what makes the big battle wagons tick.

In addition to learning the rigid routine of life aboard ship, the Midshipmen will carry a full academic courts during their three months afloat. Naval officers and civilian professors at the Academy accompanied the Midshipmen.

The Academy was virtually deserted tonight, and Annapolis, compared to its activity during June week, was a ghost city.

Pope Is Assured European Chiefs Oppose Warfare

Vatican City, June 2 (AP)—Pope Pius XII told his Cardinals today his intervention in Europe's dissessions had brought assurances from leading statesmen that they were resolved to keep the peace.

The occasion for the Pope's speech was his 63d Saint's Day which is observed generally in Latin countries in place of birthdays and on which the Cardinals had come to pay the Holy Father homage

Pope Pius said the sympathetic response of European governments to his efforts on behalf of the "peace which is so much desired by the people" left the way open for his continued work to avoid war.

The Pontiff disclosed his fear early last month that international quarrels would "degenerate into bloody conflict," but said he now had "greater hopes" that pacific solutions could be found and "a stable peace" reached.

Representatives of the Holy See at that time invited the various governments to examine their disputes. They talked with statesmen of Germany, Italy, France, Britain and Poland.

The Pope's activities in behalf of peace are regarded in some Vatican quarters as increasing the likelihood of the United States establishing diplomatic representation at the Holy See.

A Vatican news service said:

"In the present delicate situation of the world, the Pope's work of pacification is great and noted by all.

"A representative of the United States to the Vatican might assist Pius XII in this salutary activity desired by the whole world and followed by all Catholics with continuous and public prayers."

Five Will Receive Honorary Degrees From Maryland U

College Park, Md., June 2 (AP) — The University of Maryland today named a governor, surgeon, aircraft manufacturer, educator and municipal government expert on whom it will confer honorary degrees at tomorrow's commencement.

All five are men, three of them alumni.

Those named and the degrees they will receive were:

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, doctor of laws.

Glenn L. Martin, nationally known manufacturer of aircraft, doctor of engineering.

Melvin C. Hazen, a member of the board of District of Columbia commissioners, doctor of laws.

Cecil Willis Creel, director of the University of Nevada extension service, doctor of agriculture.

Dr. Fred W. Rankin, noted Lexington, Ky., surgeon, doctor of science.

Hazen, O'Conor and Dr. Rankin are alumni of the university.

University officials announced also that three honorary certificates in agriculture would be awarded, to William Alan McGregor, Worton, Md., president of the state Aberdeen-Angus Association; Frank M. Shook, Easton, secretary of the Tri-State Packers Association, and Philip C. Turner, Parkton, president of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation.

This was alumni day, and old-grads joined seniors and undergraduates in a day filled with festivities traditional with each year's school closing.

They held class reunions, informal tours of new buildings, attended luncheons and a band concert. The latter was at historic Rossbourg Inn, which dates back to the revolutionary war and boasts a bedroom in which General Lafayette slept.

The inn, recently restored, was dedicated by the alumni.

The festivities closed with the annual June ball tonight.

German Jews on Way to Hamburg; Barred from U.S.

Truth Kept from Them To Prevent Mass Suicide Attempts

Havana, Cuba, June 2 (AP) — A desperate boatload of 907 German Jewish refugees sailed out of Havana harbor today, heartened somewhat by a shipboard rumor that they might yet find new homes in the western world after being denied entry into Cuba.

Hamburg, Germany, their starting point, was the destination of the German liner St. Louis, whose departure marked another unsuccessful attempt by German Jews to settle in this hemisphere.

But to avoid collective suicide attempts, word was spread on board that the United States government had authorized their landing in New York if continuing efforts for their entry into Cuba failed.

Get No News from U. S.

Kept from them was the news from Washington that government officials there said no arrangements had been made for them to land in New York or any other United States port.

Smiles spread over tear-stained faces among refugees who took the report at face value. Wailing which had grown louder during five days of vain efforts to enter Cuba turned to happy laughter. Relatives and friends left behind feared the worst when the tragic passengers learn their true destination.

Some expressed fears there might be attempts to force Capt. Gustav Shroder of the St. Louis to head for another port.

Fear Mass Suicides

Others spoke of the possibility of mass suicides, the fear of which led captain Shroeder to delay his departure until President Federico Laredo Bru ordered him to sail or be towed from Cuban waters by a gunboat.

Two Battleships, 22 Other Vessels Ordered by Navy

New Armada To Cost $350,000,000 Soon To Be Started

By EWARD E. BOMAR

Washington, June 2 (AP) — The Navy, making a tremendous spurt in the world race for sea power, placed orders today for two 45,000-ton battleships and 22 other vessels. The new armada is expected to cost $350,000,000.

Assistant Secretary Charles Edison indicated that a major purpose of this action, unprecedented since the World War, was to speed restoration of the five to three ratio of superiority over Japan in tonnage. This ratio was established in naval treaties, but the treaties are now defunct, and Edison told reporters today:

"To the best of our information, the margin is now only about five to four. Japan and Great Britain were building during the years when we were idle."

Order Work Started

Without waiting for funds to become available July 1, the start of a new fiscal year, the Navy ordered work started on 19 of the 23 ships for which Congress provided in the $773,000,000 appropriation bill President Roosevelt signed last week. The other five ships ordered today had been authorized previously.

Dividing the work between government and commercial shipyards, the Navy awarded the two battleships and 10 other vessels to Navy yards and let contracts for 12 craft to private builders. Almost as the awards were announced, the President signed a measure authorizing $54,000,000 worth of construction at naval shore bases. The bill virtually completed the Navy's legislative program for this session of Congress. Included in nearly 100 projects was a $8,485,000 drydock for Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, Pacific outpost.

"Good Sized" Navy

The Navy's order involved 159,800 tons which Edison said was "a good size navy" in itself. All but two seaplane tenders are combat ships.

Meanwhile Edison reported that work on 74 ships already started was "clicking".

In addition to saving time at the start, the Assistant Secretary said that by duplicating plans without sacrificing quality the time of building destroyers was reduced from 36 to 24 months.

Actual preliminary work has started, he added, on the cruisers and some other vessels.

Secondly, he objected to coupling a reduction in individual surtax rates with the taxation of future issues of federal, state and municipal securities.

Hitler Believed To Have Captured Yugoslavia Favor

Display of Might Said To Have Impressed Prince Paul

Berlin, June 2 (AP)—Informed Nazis expressed conviction tonight, after Regent Prince Paul of Yugoslavia had been shown a cross-section of Germany's military might, that his country would remain helpful to Berlin in the Balkans.

Britain and France, they asserted, would not be able to woo Yugoslavia into what Nazis charge is the plan of London and Paris to "encircle" the Rome-Berlin axis partner.

In the Nazi view, Prince Paul, head of Yugoslavia's regency during the minority of 15-year old King Peter, intends to maintain Belgrade's neutrality.

This was the meaning, they said, of his response to the toast at an elaborate state dinner Thursday night in which Reichsfuehrer Hitler pledged respect "for all time" for Yugoslavia's frontier with Germany.

The regent, here for a five-day state visit, replied with an expression of gratification that Germany "intends to recognize Yugoslavia's freedom and independence."

A neutral Yugoslavia aloof from British-French front and delivering 50 percent or more of her raw materials to Germany and another large percentage to Italy, it was said, is all that Germany wants.

The Fuehrer's references at the state banquet to Yugoslavia's "freedom and independence" and the permanence of the two nation's common frontier were cited as proof that Nazidom desires no more than that.

(At Nagykanizsa, Hungary, meanwhile, acts of violence involving Slovenes and Germans in northern Yugoslavia were described in reports filtering into Hungary through heavy censorship.

(They told of the wrecking of homes of Nazi Germans by Slovene nationalists and said clashes had occurred in many localities along Yugoslavia's frontier with Germany, an area within the pre-war Austro-Hungarian empire.)

Hitler appeared today to go out of his way to impress Prince Paul.

Barber Shop Quartet Going Strong in First National Convention

Tulsa, Okla., June 2 (AP) — The harmony was terrific as delegates thawed their pipes today at the first annual convention of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America.

And that sentimental tune, "I had a dream, dear," quivered under the fnitial tonsil twanging of the first 50 or so delegates to arrive. They hit it low and dreamy, high and sweet, fast and swingy trying to live up to the name and purpose of their organization.

"Honey," also came in for a thorough vocal mauling, with the "Kentucky" group closing strong.

Believes All Are Dead

"I am sorry but there is no hope for the men remaining in the submarine," an official of the Cammell Laird shipyard said brokenly to a crowd dotted with wives and relatives of the seamen and civilian occupants of the vessel.

Four of those who were in the vessel were saved through use of the Davis "lung" apparatus. Three others were said by a lifeboat crew to have perished in an attempt to follow the four to the surface.

While there was no official explanation of the accident, these were the salient facts of the disaster and attmpts to effect a reccue:

Search for the new vessel was started three hours after she submerged in a test dive preparatory to being turned over to the British admiralty;

At 7:50 A. M., Friday, the Thetis was discovered; a 265 foot vessel, she lay in 130 feet of water with 18 feet of the tail above water at a 45 degree angle;

The tail disappeared with a strong tide at dusk, Friday, and failed to reappear.

Up until late Friday the admiralty had expressed confidence that the men would be rescued. Before the stern went out of sight there had been attempts to cut holes to let out stale air and admit a fresh air supply to the entombed men. A hawser had been reported attached to the submarine in an effort to lift it up further. It snapped under the strain.

Admiralty Not Optimistic

Announcement of the Cammell Laird official that hope for the men had been given up took a step further a grave statement of the admiralty before midnight that hope was greatly diminished.

The announcements had no effect on the frantic yet apparently futile rescue operations being pressed forward by a huge force of naval vessels.

But to hundreds huddled in the shadow of the great cranes at the shipyards the Cammell Laird official's statement carried an air of finality.

Wives wept and were led away.

Members of a North Wales lifeboat crew which visited the chill, search-lighted scene returned with the story that three occupants of the Thetis had perished in attempting to follow to the surface the only four survivors.

Their narrative suggested that others died desperately in trying to save themselves with the Davis "lung" apparatus.

Never before, said the lifeboat men, had they seen such a heartrending drama.

"We have never felt so helpless," said one who often had participated in rescues in turbulent seas.

Early in the evening they went to the scene, carrying doctors in their lifeboat—for hope had flamed in the afternoon when a portion of the Thetis' stern was visible.

Spend Hours on Scene

"We were there for more than four and a half hours, and waited patiently, hoping some more would be able to get away from her," said Robin Williams, coxswain of the lifeboat.

"She did not reappear at low tide. Something—the strong tide had dislodged her from the mud bank in which she apparently stuck nose down, and the tide hitting against the stern pushed her down to the bed of the sea."

"There were rescue vessels of all kinds around, divers and admirals. As time went on the chances of rescue became more and more slender. We could do nothing, of course, and when we came away no more had left the submarine."

It had been a dramatic day of agony in which the high spring tides had a major part.

The low early morning tide first made the stern visible. There was a rush of hope then that airlines might be attached by divers, that a hole might be made for escape from the hull, or, failing that, that navy "camels,"—buoyant cylinders of compressed air—might be attached to lift the craft entirely to the surface.

But at midnight all had been tried and all had been fruitless.

The tides dragged divers away from their objectives.

Every second that sped by cut into whatever margin of safety those under the water might have had. Ambulances with crisp, fresh sheets were at the dockside, just in case.

Eyes were strained into the sunset and shaded with the hands of shore watchers for some glimpse of the sharklike fin of the Thetis' stern which had given so much encouragement when it could be seen for nearly seven full hours.

No Diving Bells

Those on shore could guess fairly accurately why the rescue efforts were failing—they could see the tide and the deeping darkness. They were told that the British navy had no such diving bells as had saved 33 from the sunken submarine Squalus off Portsmouth, N. H., last week.

But no one had any clear-cut idea of just what happened Thursday afternoon when the shiny Thetis, a striking token of Britain's rearmament in a warlike world, became disabled in her diving test.

The four survivors—Capt. H. P. K. Oram, Lieut. H. G. Woods, chief stoker W. C. Arnold and P. Shaw, an employe of the builders—were closely guarded. There was not the slightest official light on what they told when they were picked up by the destroyer Brazen.

All that was permitted to seep from the official wall of secrecy was that the quartet had said their companions expected to follow them upward in the escape apparatus.

One authority said:

"It is obvious now that the fore part of the submarine is flooded, and the fact that no further members of the crew were rescued by the Davis escape apparatus suggested to experts that the water is now in the chamber below the aft escape hatch (from which the four had escaped).

"It is certain, after the rescue of the four men, that they were using the aft hatch. From the admiralty statement it appears that no other members of the crew could reach the chamber beneath it to be released to the surface."

Each time a man is released by the Davis "lung," a certain amount of water goes into the submarine, and the air supply is correspondingly reduced. The escaping man rises to the surface breathing oxygen through a special mask.

Although no one could say for certain why the Thetis plunged down into the mud of the shelflike bay, one supposition was that the forward torpedo tubes were flooded in the test dive.

Cause of Sinking Unknown

Whether water entered through the torpedo tubes being accidentally open during the diving or testing was the question asked by most experts.

The four survivors were reported to have said that all their companions were alive when the quartet began their ascent. From this, some experts reasoned that trouble in the forward torpedo tubes was the only possible answer, because if other sections were flooded it would have been impossible for all the crew to have kept alive in the first hours of the mishap.

The shipyard was tense when Woodward, shortly after midnight, made his statement that hope had been given up.

A crowd swarmed about him at the timekeeper's office when he appeared. It was there that many of the civilian workers and technicians who went down in the Thetis had often drawn their weekly pay.

"I must announce that the experiment of raising the Thetis' stern has not been successful," he began. Then he declared that there was no hope.

"The best thing you can do is to disperse and go home quietly," he concluded.

There was a minute or two of silence. Someone yelled: "where are your experts?" but he was silenced by those around him.

William R. Brewer of Cumberland Re-Named from Allegany County

Baltimore, June 2. (AP)—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor announced tonight appointments to seven county boards of education, the Washington suburban sanitary commission, and the newly-created real estate board of Baltimore.

Frank B. Smith, of Mt. Rainier, was the appointee to the sanitary commission. Smith is a member of the Prince Georges county Park and Planning Commission, a professor at Gallaudet College, Washington, and editor of a weekly newspaper.

The governor's selection for a full-time membership on the commission was J. Donald Clagett, of Silver Spring, and his selection for chairman was Perry Boswell, of Prince Georges county.

Board of education appointments included:

Allegany county—William R. Brewer, Cumberland; Carroll county, Edward C. Bixler, new Windsor; Charles county—J. Thomas Bowling, Wicomico; Garrett county—Stuart F. Hamill, Oakland.

Others were Baltimore county—Ernest E. Wooden, Woodensburg; Dorchester county—Albert F. Kirwan, Cambridge; Wicomico county—J. William Siemons Salisbury.

Kuhn Asserts He Is Innocent and Will Free Nation

Bund Head Declares Attempt Is Being Made To Destroy Him

New York, June 2. (AP)—Fritz Kuhn, national chieftain of the pro-Nazi German-American Bund, declared today that despite a "smearing campaign" designed "to morally destroy me," he would carry his "struggle against all subversive elements forward as never before until a truly free America again is achieved."

In a statement issued after his counsel had failed to obtain permission to examine minutes of the grand jury which indicted Kuhn recently for grand larceny and forgery, the Bund leader asserted his innocence and asked if the explanation of what he termed the "persecution" must "be looked for in the field of politics."

"Despite a long sequence of federal, state and municipal investigations and summary trumped-up court cases, nothing dishonorable, treasonable or in any way disloyal has been shown against the Bund, its sub-divisions, related organizations, or myself," he said.

Regarding the indictment, returned in connection with the alleged theft of $14,548.59 of Bund funds, Kuhn said all moneys collected and turned over to him "will be duly accounted for." He asserted he had not "spent a single cent of the Bund's money in any manner other than authorized by the national convention of the Bund."

It was indicated Kuhn probably would not be tried before fall.

Midshipmen Enroll On 3 Battleships

Annapolis, June 2 (AP)—Midshipmen today enrolled in a school with three battleships for classrooms and the Atlantic ocean for a text.

Twelve hundred midshipmen of the classes of 1940 and 1942 went aboard the New York, Texas and Arkansas for their annual three-month cruise.

Deserting the Naval Academy where they have studied the theory of navigation and marine engineering for nine months, the Middies will spend the summer gathering practical "dope" on what makes the big battle wagons tick.

In addition to learning the rigid routine of life aboard ship, the Midshipmen will carry a full academic courts during their three months afloat. Naval officers and civilian professors at the Academy accompanied the Midshipmen.

The Academy was virtually deserted tonight, and Annapolis, compared to its activity during June week, was a ghost city.

Pope Is Assured European Chiefs Oppose Warfare

Vatican City, June 2 (AP)—Pope Pius XII told his Cardinals today his intervention in Europe's dissessions had brought assurances from leading statesmen that they were resolved to keep the peace.

The occasion for the Pope's speech was his 63d Saint's Day which is observed generally in Latin countries in place of birthdays and on which the Cardinals had come to pay the Holy Father homage

Pope Pius said the sympathetic response of European governments to his efforts on behalf of the "peace which is so much desired by the people" left the way open for his continued work to avoid war.

The Pontiff disclosed his fear early last month that international quarrels would "degenerate into bloody conflict," but said he now had "greater hopes" that pacific solutions could be found and "a stable peace" reached.

Representatives of the Holy See at that time invited the various governments to examine their disputes. They talked with statesmen of Germany, Italy, France, Britain and Poland.

The Pope's activities in behalf of peace are regarded in some Vatican quarters as increasing the likelihood of the United States establishing diplomatic representation at the Holy See.

A Vatican news service said:

"In the present delicate situation of the world, the Pope's work of pacification is great and noted by all.

"A representative of the United States to the Vatican might assist Pius XII in this salutary activity desired by the whole world and followed by all Catholics with continuous and public prayers."

Five Will Receive Honorary Degrees From Maryland U

College Park, Md., June 2 (AP) — The University of Maryland today named a governor, surgeon, aircraft manufacturer, educator and municipal government expert on whom it will confer honorary degrees at tomorrow's commencement.

All five are men, three of them alumni.

Those named and the degrees they will receive were:

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, doctor of laws.

Glenn L. Martin, nationally known manufacturer of aircraft, doctor of engineering.

Melvin C. Hazen, a member of the board of District of Columbia commissioners, doctor of laws.

Cecil Willis Creel, director of the University of Nevada extension service, doctor of agriculture.

Dr. Fred W. Rankin, noted Lexington, Ky., surgeon, doctor of science.

Hazen, O'Conor and Dr. Rankin are alumni of the university.

University officials announced also that three honorary certificates in agriculture would be awarded, to William Alan McGregor, Worton, Md., president of the state Aberdeen-Angus Association; Frank M. Shook, Easton, secretary of the Tri-State Packers Association, and Philip C. Turner, Parkton, president of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation.

This was alumni day, and old-grads joined seniors and undergraduates in a day filled with festivities traditional with each year's school closing.

They held class reunions, informal tours of new buildings, attended luncheons and a band concert. The latter was at historic Rossbourg Inn, which dates back to the revolutionary war and boasts a bedroom in which General Lafayette slept.

The inn, recently restored, was dedicated by the alumni.

German Jews on Way to Hamburg; Barred from U.S.

Truth Kept from Them To Prevent Mass Suicide Attempts

Havana, Cuba, June 2 (AP) — A desperate boatload of 907 German Jewish refugees sailed out of Havana harbor today, heartened somewhat by a shipboard rumor that they might yet find new homes in the western world after being denied entry into Cuba.

Hamburg, Germany, their starting point, was the destination of the German liner St. Louis, whose departure marked another unsuccessful attempt by German Jews to settle in this hemisphere.

But to avoid collective suicide attempts, word was spread on board that the United States government had authorized their landing in New York if continuing efforts for their entry into Cuba failed.

Get No News from U. S.

Kept from them was the news from Washington that government officials there said no arrangements had been made for them to land in New York or any other United States port.

Smiles spread over tear-stained faces among refugees who took the report at face value. Wailing which had grown louder during five days of vain efforts to enter Cuba turned to happy laughter. Relatives and friends left behind feared the worst when the fragic passengers learned their true destination.

Some expressed fears there might be attempts to force Capt. Gustav Shroder of the St. Louis to head for another port.

Fear Mass Suicides

Others spoke of the possibility of mass suicides, the fear of which led captain Shroeder to delay his departure until President Federico Laredo Bru ordered him to sail or be towed from Cuban waters by a gunboat.

Pardon Board Republicans Present Sheepskin to T. A. Logue

Harrisburg, Pa., June 2 (AP)—A retired Democratic cabinet officer this week received a token of appreciation from three Republicans with whom he served.

Three members of the state board of pardons — Lieutenant Governor Samuel S. Lewis, Secretary of the Commonwealth S. M. A. O'Hara and Attorney General Claude T. Aeno—sent a resolution on sheepskin to Thomas A. Logue, former secretary of internal affairs.

Logue served with the three Republicans on the board from January 17 until last month, when his term expired. His place has been taken by William S. Livengood, Jr., new secretary of internal affairs, a Republican.

The resolution sent to Logue is embossed with the seals of the secretary of the commonwealth and the secretary of the board of pardons, and bears the signatures of the members. The resolution expressed to Logue "sincere thanks and high appreciation for his helpful cooperation, his generous kindness and his devoted public service in the work of the board and extended to him the best wishes of the members for a full measure of success, health, happiness and longevity."

Sixth for Schrock

The legislative session recently concluded was the sixth regular term for Rep. Jacob Schrock, Republican from Somerset county.

Schrock is dean of the House delegation between the regular terms. He served in seven special sessions and hasn't missed a day's attendance.

General Exodus

Conclusion of the 1939 session brought a general exodus from the capitol. Cabinet members who stayed close to their desks while the legislators were sitting took the occasion to dash off on brief vacations. Governor James went to Harvey's lake in the Poconos, one of his favorite retreats. Others journeyed to the seashore.

In Same Hour

The 1937 and 1939 regular legislative sessions adjourned within the same hour. This year the lawmakers quit officially at 6:30 a. m. (EST) in the House and 6:35 a. m. in the Senate. Two years ago the official adjournment time was 6:55 a. m. (EST).

Discouraging Start

John Siggins, Jr., got off to a somewhat discouraging start as the first Republican member of the Democratic-created public utility commission. He took over the duties vacated by Former Commissioner John Sullivan, removed by Governor James in a row between the commission and James over budget problems.

The result—Siggins failed to receive a check on his first pay day in the $10,000-a-year-office. The governor held up all the commission's pay envelopes pending drastic reductions in the P.U.C.'S June budget.

The situation was cleared this week with the dismissal of 150 commission employes, a reduction in the budget and the release of paychecks.

"Exposition Feet" Due to Excesses

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

My friend, Dr. Philip S. Hench, of the Mayo Clinic, warns that this year will probably see an epidemic of gout.

The reason for this melancholy outlook is the fact that at each end of our great country we have a fair—the New York World's Fair and the Golden Gate International Exposition at San Francisco.

And fair, according to Dr. Hench, cause dietary indiscretion, excessive walking and standing on the feet, and excessive drinking, and all this predisposes to gout.

Dr. Hench even has some historical support for his prediction, as witness the gout wave that accompanied the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago during 1933 and 1934.

"Exposition Feet"

"Exposition feet" will be the name given to the condition in popular parlance, but it will really be acute gouty arthritis.

Gout is supposed to be a rare and even disappearing disease, but when once you go on the lookout for it, you find a good many cases. When I first started to be on the lookout for it, the first case I saw was in my own person. I tried to persuade Dr. Hench that what I had was arthritis, but he said, "No, doctor, you've got the gout."

It should be easy to recognize by the abrupt onset, usually in the base of the big toe, an acute four or five-day course of swelling, pain and disability, and then as abrupt a disappearance. Two days after the decline of an attack of gout, the victim can walk, run, waltz or jump fences as well as he ever did. Hippocrates long ago quoted the case of an athlete who, a week after a bout with the gout, won a race in the Olympic games.

Fishing Trip, Too

Besides exposition seeing, a fishing trip is a potent provocative of the gout. Dr. Hench has a very interesting lecture on gout, and during it he shows a lantern slide which exhibits a fishing rod, a bottle of whisky and a shoe with a hole cut over the big toe. It is mute but eloquent testimony to the fact that an elderly gentleman who goes on a fashing trip and walks around too much on uneven rocks and pebbles and indulges in a few snorts at eventide, just to lessen the fatigue, is likely to come home with an attack of the ancient enemy.

"Thousands of Americans are suffering with gout today, only most of them don't know what they have," says Dr. Hench. "The modern generation of medical men was taught to believe that gout practically disappeared after the war. As a result, the statistics of several large clinics indicate that most gouty patients have to suffer their disease five to fifteen years before it is properly diagnosed."

The lesson is that if you are over 40 years of age, go easy at the fairs on the eats, the drinks and the walks.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. B.: "Please describe something about a fresh tomato. I have a friend who was under observation in a hospital. The doctor told her it was her liver and said to go home and eat a fresh tomoto every day without fail. Is that good for everybody? I have another friend and she is eating one every day because this other friend is eating one."

Answer—A fresh tomato is a delicious and healthy dish. It contains as much or more vitamin C than a lemon, and the skin of a tomato is one of the best cathartics on earth. A fresh tomato a day will not hurt anybody—it is a kind of variation of "an apple a day keeps the doctor away"—but the idea that what the doctor prescribes for one person is good for another is about as sensible as supposing that because a doctor has prescribed crutches for a man with a broken leg everybody in the neighborhood should take to crutches.

Will Exhume 26 More In Insurance Plots

Philadelphia, June 2 (AP) — The bodies of 26 more persons among the 100 or more believed victims of the Eastern insurance-murder conspiracy are to be raised for examination, Coroner Charles H Hersch said yesterday.

He disclosed the graves will be opened as fast as his assistants can make reports on the grisly remains submitted to them almost daily for scrutiny. Thirteen bodies have been exhumed in the Philadelphia area, two yesterday. Traces of poison were found in seven. Examination of four is underway.

As investigators arranged to proceed with exhumations, Judge Albert S. C. Millar set dates this month for hearing evidence against three men who pleaded guilty to participation in the murder plots. One man has been convicted with the death sentence mandatory.

Every tissue of the human system must have its daily quota of calcium for normal, healthy functioning.

More Shots Fired in Harlan Mine War

Harlan, Ky., June 2 (AP)—Miners at a Harlan county pit operating without a union contract were reported fired upon from ambush today—with no casualties—as Gov. A. B. Chandler, at Frankfurt, reasserted his willingness to enter deadlocked contract negotiations between operators and the United Mines Workers (C.I.O.)

Brig. Gen. Ellerbe Carter, commanding more than 1,000 national guardsmen on duty in the county, said he was investigating the "sniping," reported from nearby Liggett, site of the Mahan-Ellison coal corporation.

General Carter said national guardsmen assigned to the mine did not return the fire, as other troops had when miners returning to work fired upon at another mine two weeks ago.

Manufacturers See Step Toward Recovery

Chicago, June 2 (AP)—The board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers said in a statement here that recognition by Congress of the need for tax revision, social security act modification and Wagner Act was "a marked step toward national recovery."

The statement, issued by Howard Coonley of New York, president of the association, at the close of the board's annual midwestern meeting, said the tax program now under consideration would help but "it is only a short step in the right direction."

Board Colleagues Honor Retiring Keystone Official

Pardon Board Republicans Present Sheepskin to T. A. Logue

Harrisburg, Pa., June 2 (AP)—A retired Democratic cabinet officer this week received a token of appreciation from three Republicans with whom he served.

Three members of the state board of pardons — Lieutenant Governor Samuel S. Lewis, Secretary of the Commonwealth S. M. A. O'Hara and Attorney General Claude T. Aeno—sent a resolution on sheepskin to Thomas A. Logue, former secretary of internal affairs.

Logue served with the three Republicans on the board from January 17 until last month, when his term expired. His place has been taken by William S. Livengood, Jr., new secretary of internal affairs, a Republican.

The resolution sent to Logue is embossed with the seals of the secretary of the commonwealth and the secretary of the board of pardons, and bears the signatures of the members. The resolution expressed to Logue "sincere thanks and high appreciation for his helpful cooperation, his generous kindness and his devoted public service in the work of the board and extended to him the best wishes of the members for a full measure of success, health, happiness and longevity."

Sixth for Schrock

The legislative session recently concluded was the sixth regular term for Rep. Jacob Schrock, Republican from Somerset county.

Schrock is dean of the House delegation between the regular terms. He served in seven special sessions and hasn't missed a day's attendance.

General Exodus

Conclusion of the 1939 session brought a general exodus from the capitol. Cabinet members who stayed close to their desks while the legislators were sitting took the occasion to dash off on brief vacations. Governor James went to Harvey's lake in the Poconos, one of his favorite retreats. Others journeyed to the seashore.

In Same Hour

The 1937 and 1939 regular legislative sessions adjourned within the same hour. This year the lawmakers quit officially at 6:30 a. m. (EST) in the House and 6:35 a. m. in the Senate. Two years ago the official adjournment time was 6:55 a. m. (EST).

Discouraging Start

John Siggins, Jr., got off to a somewhat discouraging start as the first Republican member of the Democratic-created public utility commission. He took over the duties vacated by Former Commissioner John Sullivan, removed by Governor James in a row between the commission and James over budget problems.

The result—Siggins failed to receive a check on his first pay day in the $10,000-a-year-office. The governor held up all the commission's pay envelopes pending drastic reductions in the P.U.C.'S June budget.

The situation was cleared this week with the dismissal of 150 commission employes, a reduction in the budget and the release of paychecks.

Russia Bluffing, Japanese Declare

Tokyo, June 2 (AP)—The Japanese press described as a "bluff" today the statement of Soviet Russia's foreign commissar that the borders of Outer Mongolia would be defended. Vyacheslaff Molotoff, who gave the The newspaper Yomiuri declared warning in an address to the Supreme Soviet Wednesday, had spoken "much differently" recently when discussing Manchoukuo-Mongolian border fighting with Shigenori Togo, Japanese ambassador in Moscow.

The press generally interpreted Molotoff's speech as an effort to weaken the anti-comintern pact.

"Exposition Feet" Due to Excesses

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

My friend, Dr. Philip S. Hench, of the Mayo Clinic, warns that this year will probably see an epidemic of gout.

The reason for this melancholy outlook is the fact that at each end of our great country we have a fair—the New York World's Fair and the Golden Gate International Exposition at San Francisco.

And fair, according to Dr. Hench, cause dietary indiscretion, excessive walking and standing on the feet, and excessive drinking, and all this predisposes to gout.

Dr. Hench even has some historical support for his prediction, as witness the gout wave that accompanied the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago during 1933 and 1934.

"Exposition Feet"

"Exposition feet" will be the name given to the condition in popular parlance, but it will really be acute gouty arthritis.

Gout is supposed to be a rare and even disappearing disease, but when once you go on the lookout for it, you find a good many cases. When I first started to be on the lookout for it, the first case I saw was in my own person. I tried to persuade Dr. Hench that what I had was arthritis, but he said, "No, doctor, you've got the gout."

It should be easy to recognize by the abrupt onset, usually in the base of the big toe, an acute four or five-day course of swelling, pain and disability, and then as abrupt a disappearance. Two days after the decline of an attack of gout, the victim can walk, run, waltz or jump fences as well as he ever did. Hippocrates long ago quoted the case of an athlete who, a week after a bout with the gout, won a race in the Olympic games.

Fishing Trip, Too

Besides exposition seeing, a fishing trip is a potent provocative of the gout. Dr. Hench has a very interesting lecture on gout, and during it he shows a lantern slide which exhibits a fishing rod, a bottle of whisky and a shoe with a hole cut over the big toe. It is mute but eloquent testimony to the fact that an elderly gentleman who goes on a fashing trip and walks around too much on uneven rocks and pebbles and indulges in a few snorts at eventide, just to lessen the fatigue, is likely to come home with an attack of the ancient enemy.

"Thousands of Americans are suffering with gout today, only most of them don't know what they have," says Dr. Hench. "The modern generation of medical men was taught to believe that gout practically disappeared after the war. As a result, the statistics of several large clinics indicate that most gouty patients have to suffer their disease five to fifteen years before it is properly diagnosed."

The lesson is that if you are over 40 years of age, go easy at the fairs on the eats, the drinks and the walks.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. B.: "Please describe something about a fresh tomato. I have a friend who was under observation in a hospital. The doctor told her it was her liver and said to go home and eat a fresh tomoto every day without fail. Is that good for everybody? I have another friend and she is eating one every day because this other friend is eating one."

Answer—A fresh tomato is a delicious and healthy dish. It contains as much or more vitamin C than a lemon, and the skin of a tomato is one of the best cathartics on earth. A fresh tomato a day will not hurt anybody—it is a kind of variation of "an apple a day keeps the doctor away"—but the idea that what the doctor prescribes for one person is good for another is about as sensible as supposing that because a doctor has prescribed crutches for a man with a broken leg everybody in the neighborhood should take to crutches.

Good Citizenship

WE have been hearing much lately about letting democracy save the world. But, as a matter of fact, there is a man-sized job at hand in getting the democracies to save themselves—in making the people of the democracies safe for their own democracies. And that brings the problem down to individual citizenship.

The idea was emphasized the other day by a speaker who was trying to stress the benefits of service for community good in contrast to service for self. He recalled that when he was a boy, a certain upright and honest man was always pointed to as a "law-abiding citizen."

As a matter of fact that appellation really meant nothing. The designation represented merely a general rule of conduct required and expected of all citizens. It is not a matter of praise or of congratulation for a man to be law-abiding, or honest. He is supposed to be. These are obligations devolving upon him by virtue of his citizenship.

So, the speaker went on to point out that, in order to merit the praise and esteem of his fellow citizens, a man must do more than to be honest, to observe the laws and to look out for himself. He must make himself a force for good in his own circle and in his own community by giving some consideration to the welfare and rights of others.

Now, if the dictators and the authoritarian schemes of government with their suppression of human liberties are ever to be checked, and the rule of the people is not to be swept from the face of the earth, the people who yet retain their rights and liberties must be moved to a proper appreciation of those things. They must, accordingly, be educated to the duty of citizenship.

"Every citizen a sovereign" sounds pretty well in a political speech; but intelligently doing the individual sovereignty business, bearing the individual share of the governing, performing the personal civic duty with conscientious responsibility and sane ability is another matter. In view of the strides that have been made by the totalitarian governments and of their widespread proselyting efforts within the democracies, there is much to be done in this land of ours in training citizens for the duty of sovereign citizenship.

Glorious Rain

CAME at last the rain, sweet, soothing, soft and steady, and the parched land drank it greedily. Its faint pitter-patter was music to the ears.

It was needed hereabout, as crops, flowers, lawns and all other forms of vegetation were wilting, in some instances starting to wither brown under the sharp rays of the hot sun. And it was just the kind of rain that was desired, not a sudden short shower.

Now the countryside will be a gorgeous mass of verdant beauty. It will be something to see and enjoy. Get in a car, folks, and drink your fill of it. It is June and we know that nothing is so fine as the days thereof, which make you think, with Browning, that God's in His Heaven and all's right with the world.

We in Western Maryland are fortunate, indeed. When we need the rain, it seems to come in the right time, generally speaking. We should feel grateful especially when we read of less fortunate places where dry weather has approached and even reached drought conditions. And we should feel thankful also for these mountains and hills and valleys, which are a veritable paradise. You wouldn't swap them for the flat lands, now, would you?

Making Time Count

JAMES E. ALLEN, the president of Marshall College, Huntington, W. Va., has advised members of his senior classes to take the first job they can get after leaving school and to look for something better in the meantime.

"Don't sit around and grumble if you can't find something you like," Dr. Allen said, pointing out the difficulties the graduates will encounter after receiving their diplomas. "If you can get a job of $25 a month, take it and keep your eyes open."

Dr. Allen may have run into conflict with the Wage-Hour law idea there, but he was probably thinking more of job selection than wage rate and used the wage figuratively.

In respect to the job he has given good advice. It is not so easy to pick and choose just the right kind nowadays; and it is well for young people just starting out to make the most of available opportunity rather than to remain idle and nonproductive while waiting for the choicy thing to turn up. If they have the right stuff in them it will not be long until they just naturally gravitate into the niche for which their talents are the best adapted.

Plain Arithmetic

IN the old, self-reliant horse and buggy days that now stir only the ridicule of New Dealers who prate incessantly but vaguely of economic security, it was the objective of many Americans to save as much as $1,000 for a rainy day. Some measure of their success may be found in statistics which show that the savings banks today have 45,000,000 depositors and that the average balance is $550.

The ambition of a sizeable, if smaller, number of the thrifty was to accumulate life savings that could be safely invested to assure an annual income of $1,000 for old age.

This goal was within the reach of the mechanic, the farmer, the business man and the professional man in 1920 if he had, through a lifetime of toil, been able to save about $17,300. That amount, invested in government bonds, would have produced an income of $1,000 a year.

But today, at the present rate of return, the saver would have to have $43,000 to invest in government bonds to produce the $1,000 income.

Why is it just two and a half times as hard today for the thrifty to provide an est egg for old age as it was in 1920? The answer is obvious: New Deal borrowing of billions in conjunction with policies which have paralyzed enterprise and dried up the demand of business for new capital has eliminated competition in the money market and has driven the interest rate down to a point where some government issues yield less than one-tenth of one per cent and several nothing at all.

Upturn

UNHERALDED by the business "experts" and unsung by all, a business upturn of more than flash-in-the-pan proportions has got under way quietly in the last few weeks.

Exactly when a turning point like the one just enacted occurs is difficult to fix, but it seems now that the real start toward improvement took place about three weeks ago, when automobile production snapped back after a one week decline.

Building construction awards for the last week for which figures are available stood at $75,000,000, which is three times the total for the comparative week of 1938. Steel mill output has gained for two successive weeks after a long list of gradual declines.

Railroad freight car loadings, perhaps one of the most reliable indices, are again on the upgrade. Prior to the soft coal tieup, volume was steadily declining. Freight volume is currently fifteen per cent above a year ago.

The stock market has been surging ahead, confounding the prognosticators, who were almost unanimous in predicting everything bad, including disaster, for stocks this summer.

May it gain momentum. Upturn is something this country can stand a lot more of, and then some.

Coroner's Harvest

NOW THAT all the casualties have been tabulated, it is disconcerting to learn that during the Memorial day week-end 500 humans were killed and 4,000 injured, the majority in motor mishaps. The total killed is almost twice that of last year; the total injured 2,000 more.

Indications are that it's going to be a good summer for the coroner. Motoring seems destined to set a new mark and the casualty list is making an auspicious start. The two fairs operating at opposite ends of the Nation will contribute their full share to the record mark for motoring. The new and more economical cars which are being sold in almost record numbers will also contribute their share. The old gas-eating buses were a deterrent to mileage when parlous times struck, but the 1939 models which are relatively free of mechanical defects and require little fuel are rarin' to go places, and will.

Only eternal vigilance on the part of every driver can bring about a reduction similar to last year's in the number of automobile casualties this summer.

More Browsing by the Browser

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser hereby violates one of his oldest rules: He reviews a book on a subject about which he is completely ignorant, that is written in a vocabulary he has trouble understanding. Carleton Stevens Coon's "Races of Europe" (Macmillan) is therefore a book that the general public will not read and that few libraries, except those of the universities, will buy.

Marshall Maslin

Dr. Coon is assistant professor of anthropology at Harvard University and it is obvious he had nobody like the Browser in mind when he wrote his massive tome. (So the Browser suggests that the Macmillan people hire a bright lad with a gift for translating scientific jargon into simple American to make a popular digest of Dr. Coon's book).

The world needs this book as ammunition against all the silly and dangerous theories about human beings that are now running riot around the world.

Everybody talks about races these days, but Dr. Coon is so learned that he hardly dares give us a definition of the word. His learning ranges back to the earliest pleistocine times, many hundreds of thousands of years ago "when man was merely a numerically unimportant parasite in the total fauna." (And that reminds the Browser of Balfour's definition of human history as a brief and discreditable episode in the life of one of the meaner planets).

The author knows our earliest ancestors at least aas well as you know the people next door. We commonly use the phrase "homo sapiens" as equivalent to the entire human race. Dr. Coon tells us that homo sapiens was but one of the early groups. Such fellows as the neanderthal man and the Galley Hill man were quite different individuals with "a heavier, hypermasculine endocrine form."

So this scientist gives us a picture of our past that rebukes any glib loquacity about the human race.

To the Browser almost the most exciting part of the book is a photographic suplement of hundreds of pictures of modern human beings.

Interesting, too, is Dr. Coon's flat statement that people who migrate from an old home to a new one are NOT representative of the people in the old home land. The Americans who came here in the Seventeenth century are "not like Englishmen in the larger sense of the word" but were a definitely selected group. The Americans who went west to the middle land or those who went to the southwest for cattle raising were different, even physically, from those who stayed at home.

Does that interest you? Well, it does interest the Browser greatly—and he wishes Herr Hitler would read "Races of Europe."

BOOK CHATTER: Waldo Frank thinks his new novel "The Bridegroom Cometh" is his best yet. He writes: "Most authors, in a very obvious way, write the same story over and over." . . . The Browser has noticed that too. Frank is in Mexico now, advising the Mexicans on Mexican-American problems. . . The title of James Joyce's "Finnigan's Wake" comes from an old Irish ballad. . . . The Browser's favorite literary wife has always been Thomas Carlyle's Jane. If you'd like the lady too, read Townsend Scudder's "Jane Welsh Carlyle." It's lively and complete.

And don't miss John Jennings's "Next to Valor," a fine pre-Revolutionary tale. . . . Edwin Rosskam who did that fine book of photographs of San Francisco once lived three and a half years in French Polynesia, and tried writing novels before rejection slips drove him to photography. . . . John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath" is a best-selling novel but the Browser has a hunch it will never be made into a movie. Too many powerful folk howling about Steinbeck's social and economic beliefs. . . . That's enough from Marsh Maslin

The Browser.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

John Adams rigged William Henry Vernon with a handsome suit of pink satin when he sent him to France on on a mission of state, in 1778. Adams wrote that he did this "with a view to accomplish him for business . . . or in any other way that he might be most useful to his country and our rising independent states." The pink suit was a good investment for the aspiring new nation.

Mr. Vernon, a beau sabreur of Newport, arrested French attention with his gay, smartly-cut garments, got some deep inside information, put over some nice deals, and brought the suit back as good as new. Here it is today in the Museum of Costume Art in Rockefeller Center, one of the exhibits in the museum's exhibition, billed as "A Cycle of American Dress."

The collection has been assembled from seventeen sources, including individuals, colleges and other museums. Shown on mannequins, with complete identification and descriptive material, the exhibition is a unique round-up of the history of our national dress, of fascinating interest not only to students of clothes design, but to all who would stipple in dry history with the laces, flounces and furbelows which are forever in the human side of the news. One could read "Janice Meredith" with fresh interest after viewing this display.

Not Laggards

Some of the Founding Fathers were a pretty grim lot, but when for any reasons of punctilio it became necessary to step out, they were not laggards. Witness the eye-filling plum-colored suit tailored for General Thomas Pinckney, by order of the State department, when he was accredited as the first American Minister to the Court of St. James's.

No linsey-woolsey for the envoy of the new up-and-coming U. S. A. Rather, figured cut-velvet, tailored to a gnat's heel by native craftsmen, an upstanding suit not made for genuflections or walking backward. Old General Pinckney had some pretty rough going, at Charleston and in the Battle of Camden and, although no strutter, he must have gained a bit of chest expansion as he appeared at the Court of St. James's in a get-up like that, to declare America in, on even terms with all comers.

* * *

Real Fol-de-rols

Naturally the old-timers didn't confine themselves to cutting a dash in Europe. Here's the tan-fringed buckskin frontier coat worn by George Washington's dentist, Dr. John Peter Le Mayeur, at Mt. Pleasant, where he attended General Washington.

There is also a gray silk Quaker wedding dress, worn by Margaret Shoemaker, wife of Michael Newbold, of Philadelphia, in 1798; a green silk, looped Jersey traveling coat and calash, of 1810; party dresses, street dresses, the "second day" dress of Mrs. Robert E. Lee, a pale coral moire evening dress, Shaker bonnets, quilted satin petticoats and—among the most interesting—a white surah evening dress worn by Dolly Madison while she was mistress of the White House. The collection covers the entire range of costume from slaves to gentlefolk.

Difficult To Trace

Hollywood has promoted interest in historic costumes, and perhaps the screen partly accounts for concentration on style design and a revival of past modes by current fashion designers. Oddly enough, the styles of thirty or forty years ago were more difficult to trace accurately, with their wide variations, than those of preceding decades. This was solved by a clever device. The studios marshalled complete files of all the mail-order catalogues. When it becomes necessary to style a high-stepping gentleman circa 1900, they peg him accurately, peg-top trousers, quart-cup collar and all, No. B-R216345 in the catalogue, $18.65, F. O. B. Chicago.

Movie-goers who have come a long way down the road marvel at the accuracy with which the screen gets the subtlest details of dress of forty or fifty years ago. That's how they do it. It is said that Hollywood has paid some thumping big prices for early-day catalogues, hard to come by. When our street and dress clothes go into the museum of the future, there will be no such wide range as that between buckskin and satin in men's wear. In the process of machine leveling, there are "no more hicks," so far as clothes are concerned. Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE BORERS FROM WITHOUT AND THE BORERS FROM WITHIN

Change of Punitive Taxation Course Justifies Predictions by Republicans

BY FRANKLYN WALTMAN

Glory Hallelujah! Let there be rejoicing throughout the land!

President Roosevelt has ended his "sit-down" strike against business. Somewhat grudgingly, but nevertheless affirmatively, the President has given the sign that he is willing to have Congress undertake the task of undoing some of the damage inflicted on business by punitive taxation.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, at long last, has appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee and called attention to the necessity of revising the the federal tax laws along lines which Republicans in Congress have advocated for the last three years

Thus the Republicans again have demonstrated the wisdom and constructive nature of their criticisms of certain New Deal laws. Now, Mr. Morgenthau, as he did several months ago in respect to the Social Security payroll taxes, admits that the Republican position was well taken and was not, as New Dealers as so fond of saying, just obstructive tactics.

It Was Tugwell's Idea

One of the "tax irritants" which Secretary Morgenthau now agrees should be eliminated is the tax on undistributed corporation profits. It will be recalled that Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell first proposed such taxation in his book "Industrial Discipline," written before the New Deal was inaugurated Dr. Tugwell, it will also be recalled, aspired to "make America over." His idea was to subject industry and business to government discipline—the "planned economy" idea. Some people now call it the "planned poverty" idea, since such schemes are responsible for the present 11,000,000 unemployed and the distressingly low level of farm prices.

Anyway, Dr. Tugwell sold his tax idea to another academic braintruster, the late Dr. Herman Oliphant, who was general counsel of the Treasury. Dr. Oliphant sold the idea to Congress and in 1936 it was written into the law. The Republicans on the Ways and Means committee did all they could to prevent enactment of the undistributed profits tax, but their warnings—which were accurately prophetic—were brushed aside.

Look at the Record

Not to say "we told you so" but to keep the record straight, it might be well to call attention to the objections raised in their Minority Report in 1936 by the House Republicans against this tax. They follow:

"1. It will discourage and possibly prevent the accumulation of adequate rainy-day reserves and constitutes a direct threat to the security of business, employment, and investments.

"2. It will cause corporations to restrict the distribution of their existing tax-paid reserves, which can only be rebuilt under penalty.

"3. It will discourage business rehabilitation and expansion and have a retarding effect upon recovery and re-employment.

"4. It will hamper the growth of small corporations, impede the development of new enterprises, and foster monopolies.

"5. It puts a penalty on prudence and a bounty of improvidence and constitutes an unwholesome interference with the exercise of sound judgment in the management of business.

"6. It will accentuate the extremes of future booms and depressions.

"7. It will oppress business burdened with debts and will result in a restriction on corporate credit.

8. It will drive capital out of productive enterprise into tax-exempt securities.

"9. It violates every sound principle of income taxation, is arbitrary and oppressive in its application, and will be unequal and discriminating in its operation.

"10. It will crucify financially weak business enterprises, while permitting the strong to minimize or entirely escape the tax.

"11. It will create inequities and unfair competitive situations which are far greater and more real than the imaginary ones it purports to correct.

"12. It will result in the double taxation of all dividends paid out of reserves, whether accumulated in the past or in the future.

"13. It will cause untold confusion and add bewildering complexities both in the computation and administration of the tax.

"14. It abandons an assured revenue of $1,100,000,000 annually for one purely speculative and uncertain, and which promises to be most disappointing in amount, thereby further jeopardizing the federal revenue."

Warnings Materialized

Think back over the last three years and you will find that all the things which the Republicans in 1936 predicted would happen if this tax were enacted materialized. So unfavorable were the results which followed enactment of the tax that Congress a year ago, against the wishes of the White House, greatly modified its provisions.

But even then Mr. Roosevelt refused to admit his New Deal had made a mistake. Before a bewildered graduating class in the little town of Arthurdale, West Virginia, he severely arraigned the changes made and announced he would let the bill become law without his signature. Now Secretary Morganthau, speaking for the administration, admits that the tax may as well be wiped off the law books altogether.

Thus we make progress—yet if the New Dealers had listened to the Republicans three years ago we might not today be in our present sad plight, and perhaps some of the millions now unemployed would have jobs in private industry. Nevertheless, we repeat: Glory Hallelujah!

Anything but That!

An Editorial from the Rotarian Magazine

Cherished among the many legends of the Spanish-American people of New Mexico is the story of San Ysidro.

It seems that San Ysidro was plowing his garden one Spring day, when an angel appeared and said to him, "The Lord wants see you, Ysidro. Come with me."

Ysidro plowed on. "I can't go now," he answered. "You tell the Lord that I'm late in getting my corn planted and that I'll see Him later when I've finished."

The angel nodded and disappeared.

Soon another messenger hovered about San Ysidro's plow. "The Lord wants to see you right now," he said. "And if you don't come at once, the Lord says He'll send hot winds and drought to wither your corn."

Ysidro paused only long enough to wipe the sweat from his brow. "I've had hot winds and droughts before, and they don't bother me," he said. "I can carry water from the river. Tell the Lord I can't come now, but will see Him when I have my corn planted."

Baffled, that angel, too, vanished.

A few moments later a third angel, larger and sterner than the other two, tapped Ysidro on the shoulder. "The Lord doesn't like your attitude," the heavenly courier said. "He says if you don't come with me right now He'll send a plague of locusts to devour your corn from the top and a plague of cutworms to eat its roots."

"That doesn't frighten me," answered Ysidro, turning his plow and starting back. "I've had plagues before, and with fires and hoeing and hard work, I've saved my corn. You tell the Lord I'll see Him tomorrow."

And so the third angel flew away.

San Ysidro had plowed several furrows before the fourth messenger glided to earth.

"The Lord isn't going to argue any more," the angel announced, flapping his wings hard to keep up with the stubborn plowman. "He simply said that if you don't come with me right away, He'll send you a bad neighbor."

Instantly San Ysidro stopped his mule and wrapped the reins around the plow handle. For the first time there was fear in his eyes.

"A bad neighbor!" he shouted. "No, no! I can stand hot winds and droughts, locusts and cutworms—I can stand anything but a bad neighbor. I'll go with you right now."

Hunt by Murphy Arouses Suspicion

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

New York, N. Y., June 2.—Attorney General Frank Murphy hates political corruption. He rarely passes up a chance to say so for the press. He doesn't need to do that. In the first place, so, too, do most of the rest of the folks even though they take it for granted. It is like saying: "I'm not a thief." In the second place, his whole public record says it a lot louder than he can.

Frank Murphy

Much as we must all admire this sanctified Michigander, his constant broadcasting of his posession of virtues which most of us assume of any decent man, raises two questions. Is it a "holier-than thou" complex and does he think that any group has a monopoly on virtue? If so, he hasn't enough faith in the whole electorate to occupy his office.

That is absurd because, as Michigan's governor, in the sit-down strikes, he put his faith in the eventual return to virtue of flagrant violators of laws he was sworn to enforce—and didn't. That should be condoned because it avoided bloodshed and he saw to it that law and justice prevailed in the end—even if he did dally with his oath registered in Heaven.

He can't be blamed for this and it lets him out of the suspicion of being a man whose self-advertised conscience takes no counsel of his common sense.

O. K. for the first question—Mr. Murphy is no such Pharisee as Christ condemned as a "whited wall." But it raises the second question.

* * *

Propaganda Suspected

Is there, by any chance, any low political propaganda in his travelling about the country, preaching about how if the states and the cities do not purify their elections and their judges, he is going to do it in his self-advertised odor of sanctity and, on that basis, advocate a third term for Mr. Roosevelt?

He boasts that sending Missouri's state boss Pendergast to the pen for evading federal income taxes is merely an incident of a projected general federal purge of our states and cities. In saying that, he indicates that our state governmental systems are so corrupt that our citizens no longer have faith in democracy and that it is therefore part of the "war of democracies on dictatorships" for the federal government to purify them.

Oh, just and righteous God! It is the reverse of that. We have rotten spots in our states and cities. But it is their constitutional business and not that of the federal government to clean them up. Mr. Dewey, a Republican, as a state officer has done more to clean up local political corruption than Mr. Murphy has ever done or, by any stretch of imagination could ever do, or than it is his business or responsibility or right to attempt. Civic virtue is neither a New Deal monopoly or a Murphy monopoly. If the federal government has a right to discipline local governments for vice, it has a right to discipline them for everything—and we have become a completely centralized government—a federal dictatorship.

Perversion of Justice

Boss Pendergast should have gone to jail under local law for local political corruption. He went for federal tax-evasion. Although the federal judge who sentenced him was brave enough to say, in effect, that a man should not be tried for one crime and sentenced for another, Mr. Murphy is now boasting that exactly this was done. If so it is a perversion of justice and constitutional rights, discernitable to both Mr. Murphy's piety and his jurisprudence.

If Mr. Murphy is on a true hunt for the biggest and most dangerous areas of political corruption, he will investigate not local, but federal corruption—WPA political activities and the present federal adulteration of the purity of the ballot—both federal and local—through political handouts and compulsive use of taxpayer's money. He will demand that the House enact the Senate bill to keep relief out of politics—especially in WPA—in advance of the 1940 campaign. Will he do that? Will a fox ever smell its own den first? And where does that leave our sanctimonious attorney general? It leaves him as just another demagogue plucking motes out of others' eyes with beams in his own.—Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

Capital Must Be Encouraged

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat

Overspeculation is a bad thing for the country, as we learned to our sorrow in 1929, but underspeculation is also a bad thing. We have been so intent on preventing a recurrence of 1929 that we are now sunk in the apathy of persistent underspeculation.

Whereever these matters are discussed, one fact emerges concerning which there can be no disagreement. That fact is this: Venture capital must be encouraged; otherwise it will not venture. No sane man will run the risk of losing all his capital unless he has reason to believe he has at least a gambler's chance to make a sizable profit.

In other words, no man who has money is likely to risk it solely for the purpose of being able to pay Uncle Sam a high income tax.

Good Citizenship

WE have been hearing much lately about letting democracy save the world. But, as a matter of fact, there is a man-sized job at hand in getting the democracies to save themselves—in making the people of the democracies safe for their own democracies. And that brings the problem down to individual citizenship.

The idea was emphasized the other day by a speaker who was trying to stress the benefits of service for community good in contrast to service for self. He recalled that when he was a boy, a certain upright and honest man was always pointed to as a "law-abiding citizen."

As a matter of fact that appellation really meant nothing. The designation represented merely a general rule of conduct required and expected of all citizens. It is not a matter of praise or of congratulation for a man to be law-abiding, or honest. He is supposed to be. These are obligations devolving upon him by virtue of his citizenship.

So, the speaker went on to point out that, in order to merit the praise and esteem of his fellow citizens, a man must do more than to be honest, to observe the laws and to look out for himself. He must make himself a force for good in his own circle and in his own community by giving some consideration to the welfare and rights of others.

Now, if the dictators and the authoritarian schemes of government with their suppression of human liberties are ever to be checked, and the rule of the people is not to be swept from the face of the earth, the people who yet retain their rights and liberties must be moved to a proper appreciation of those things. They must, accordingly, be educated to the duty of citizenship.

"Every citizen a sovereign" sounds pretty well in a political speech; but intelligently doing the individual sovereignty business, bearing the individual share of the governing, performing the personal civic duty with conscientious responsibility and sane ability is another matter. In view of the strides that have been made by the totalitarian governments and of their widespread proselyting efforts within the democracies, there is much to be done in this land of ours in training citizens for the duty of sovereign citizenship.

Glorious Rain

CAME at last the rain, sweet, soothing, soft and steady, and the parched land drank it greedily. Its faint pitter-patter was music to the ears.

It was needed hereabout, as crops, flowers, lawns and all other forms of vegetation were wilting, in some instances starting to wither brown under the sharp rays of the hot sun. And it was just the kind of rain that was desired, not a sudden short shower.

Now the countryside will be a gorgeous mass of verdant beauty. It will be something to see and enjoy. Get in a car, folks, and drink your fill of it. It is June and we know that nothing is so fine as the days thereof, which make you think, with Browning, that God's in His Heaven and all's right with the world.

We in Western Maryland are fortunate, indeed. When we need the rain, it seems to come in the right time, generally speaking. We should feel grateful especially when we read of less fortunate places where dry weather has approached and even reached drought conditions. And we should feel thankful also for these mountains and hills and valleys, which are a veritable paradise. You wouldn't swap them for the flat lands, now, would you?

Making Time Count

JAMES E. ALLEN, the president of Marshall College, Huntington, W. Va., has advised members of his senior classes to take the first job they can get after leaving school and to look for something better in the meantime.

"Don't sit around and grumble if you can't find something you like," Dr. Allen said, pointing out the difficulties the graduates will encounter after receiving their diplomas. "If you can get a job of $25 a month, take it and keep your eyes open."

Dr. Allen may have run into conflict with the Wage-Hour law idea there, but he was probably thinking more of job selection than wage rate and used the wage figuratively.

In respect to the job he has given good advice. It is not so easy to pick and choose just the right kind nowadays; and it is well for young people just starting out to make the most of available opportunity rather than to remain idle and nonproductive while waiting for the choicy thing to turn up. If they have the right stuff in them it will not be long until they just naturally gravitate into the niche for which their talents are the best adapted.

Plain Arithmetic

IN the old, self-reliant horse and buggy days that now stir only the ridicule of New Dealers who prate incessantly but vaguely of economic security, it was the objective of many Americans to save as much as $1,000 for a rainy day. Some measure of their success may be found in statistics which show that the savings banks today have 45,000,000 depositors and that the average balance is $550.

The ambition of a sizeable, if smaller, number of the thrifty was to accumulate life savings that could be safely invested to assure an annual income of $1,000 for old age.

This goal was within the reach of the mechanic, the farmer, the business man and the professional man in 1920 if he had, through a lifetime of toil, been able to save about $17,300. That amount, invested in government bonds, would have produced an income of $1,000 a year.

But today, at the present rate of return, the saver would have to have $43,000 to invest in government bonds to produce the $1,000 income.

Why is it just two and a half times as hard today for the thrifty to provide an est egg for old age as it was in 1920? The answer is obvious: New Deal borrowing of billions in conjunction with policies which have paralyzed enterprise and dried up the demand of business for new capital has eliminated competition in the money market and has driven the interest rate down to a point where some government issues yield less than one-tenth of one per cent and several nothing at all.

Upturn

UNHERALDED by the business "experts" and unsung by all, a business upturn of more than flash-in-the-pan proportions has got under way quietly in the last few weeks.

Exactly when a turning point like the one just enacted occurs is difficult to fix, but it seems now that the real start toward improvement took place about three weeks ago, when automobile production snapped back after a one week decline.

Building construction awards for the last week for which figures are available stood at $75,000,000, which is three times the total for the comparative week of 1938. Steel mill output has gained for two successive weeks after a long list of gradual declines.

Railroad freight car loadings, perhaps one of the most reliable indices, are again on the upgrade. Prior to the soft coal tieup, volume was steadily declining. Freight volume is currently fifteen per cent above a year ago.

The stock market has been surging ahead, confounding the prognosticators, who were almost unanimous in predicting everything bad, including disaster, for stocks this summer.

May it gain momentum. Upturn is something this country can stand a lot more of, and then some.

Coroner's Harvest

NOW THAT all the casualties have been tabulated, it is disconcerting to learn that during the Memorial day week-end 500 humans were killed and 4,000 injured, the majority in motor mishaps. The total killed is almost twice that of last year; the total injured 2,000 more.

Indications are that it's going to be a good summer for the coroner. Motoring seems destined to set a new mark and the casualty list is making an auspicious start. The two fairs operating at opposite ends of the Nation will contribute their full share to the record mark for motoring. The new and more economical cars which are being sold in almost record numbers will also contribute their share. The old gas-eating buses were a deterrent to mileage when parlous times struck, but the 1939 models which are relatively free of mechanical defects and require little fuel are rarin' to go places, and will.

Only eternal vigilance on the part of every driver can bring about a reduction similar to last year's in the number of automobile casualties this summer.

More Browsing by the Browser

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser hereby violates one of his oldest rules: He reviews a book on a subject about which he is completely ignorant, that is written in a vocabulary he has trouble understanding. Carleton Stevens Coon's "Races of Europe" (Macmillan) is therefore a book that the general public will not read and that few libraries, except those of the universities, will buy.

Marshall Maslin

Dr. Coon is assistant professor of anthropology at Harvard University and it is obvious he had nobody like the Browser in mind when he wrote his massive tome. (So the Browser suggests that the Macmillan people hire a bright lad with a gift for translating scientific jargon into simple American to make a popular digest of Dr. Coon's book).

The world needs this book as ammunition against all the silly and dangerous theories about human beings that are now running riot around the world.

Everybody talks about races these days, but Dr. Coon is so learned that he hardly dares give us a definition of the word. His learning ranges back to the earliest pleistocine times, many hundreds of thousands of years ago "when man was merely a numerically unimportant parasite in the total fauna." (And that reminds the Browser of Balfour's definition of human history as a brief and discreditable episode in the life of one of the meaner planets).

The author knows our earliest ancestors at least aas well as you know the people next door. We commonly use the phrase "homo sapiens" as equivalent to the entire human race. Dr. Coon tells us that homo sapiens was but one of the early groups. Such fellows as the neanderthal man and the Galley Hill man were quite different individuals with "a heavier, hypermasculine endocrine form."

So this scientist gives us a picture of our past that rebukes any glib loquacity about the human race.

To the Browser almost the most exciting part of the book is a photographic suplement of hundreds of pictures of modern human beings.

Interesting, too, is Dr. Coon's flat statement that people who migrate from an old home to a new one are NOT representative of the people in the old home land. The Americans who came here in the Seventeenth century are "not like Englishmen in the larger sense of the word" but were a definitely selected group. The Americans who went west to the middle land or those who went to the southwest for cattle raising were different, even physically, from those who stayed at home.

Does that interest you? Well, it does interest the Browser greatly—and he wishes Herr Hitler would read "Races of Europe."

BOOK CHATTER: Waldo Frank thinks his new novel "The Bridegroom Cometh" is his best yet. He writes: "Most authors, in a very obvious way, write the same story over and over." . . . The Browser has noticed that too. Frank is in Mexico now, advising the Mexicans on Mexican-American problems. . . The title of James Joyce's "Finnigan's Wake" comes from an old Irish ballad. . . . The Browser's favorite literary wife has always been Thomas Carlyle's Jane. If you'd like the lady too, read Townsend Scudder's "Jane Welsh Carlyle." It's lively and complete.

And don't miss John Jennings's "Next to Valor," a fine pre-Revolutionary tale. . . . Edwin Rosskam who did that fine book of photographs of San Francisco once lived three and a half years in French Polynesia, and tried writing novels before rejection slips drove him to photography. . . . John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath" is a best-selling novel but the Browser has a hunch it will never be made into a movie. Too many powerful folk howling about Steinbeck's social and economic beliefs. . . . That's enough from Marsh Maslin

Edwin C. Hill

John Adams rigged William Henry Vernon with a handsome suit of pink satin when he sent him to France on on a mission of state, in 1778. Adams wrote that he did this "with a view to accomplish him for business . . . or in any other way that he might be most useful to his country and our rising independent states." The pink suit was a good investment for the aspiring new nation.

Mr. Vernon, a beau sabreur of Newport, arrested French attention with his gay, smartly-cut garments, got some deep inside information, put over some nice deals, and brought the suit back as good as new. Here it is today in the Museum of Costume Art in Rockefeller Center, one of the exhibits in the museum's exhibition, billed as "A Cycle of American Dress."

The collection has been assembled from seventeen sources, including individuals, colleges and other museums. Shown on mannequins, with complete identification and descriptive material, the exhibition is a unique round-up of the history of our national dress, of fascinating interest not only to students of clothes design, but to all who would stipple in dry history with the laces, flounces and furbelows which are forever in the human side of the news. One could read "Janice Meredith" with fresh interest after viewing this display.

Not Laggards

Some of the Founding Fathers were a pretty grim lot, but when for any reasons of punctilio it became necessary to step out, they were not laggards. Witness the eye-filling plum-colored suit tailored for General Thomas Pinckney, by order of the State department, when he was accredited as the first American Minister to the Court of St. James's.

No linsey-woolsey for the envoy of the new up-and-coming U. S. A. Rather, figured cut-velvet, tailored to a gnat's heel by native craftsmen, an upstanding suit not made for genuflections or walking backward. Old General Pinckney had some pretty rough going, at Charleston and in the Battle of Camden and, although no strutter, he must have gained a bit of chest expansion as he appeared at the Court of St. James's in a get-up like that, to declare America in, on even terms with all comers.

Real Fol-de-rols

Naturally the old-timers didn't confine themselves to cutting a dash in Europe. Here's the tan-fringed buckskin frontier coat worn by George Washington's dentist, Dr. John Peter Le Mayeur, at Mt. Pleasant, where he attended General Washington.

There is also a gray silk Quaker wedding dress, worn by Margaret Shoemaker, wife of Michael Newbold, of Philadelphia, in 1798; a green silk, looped Jersey traveling coat and calash, of 1810; party dresses, street dresses, the "second day" dress of Mrs. Robert E. Lee, a pale coral moire evening dress, Shaker bonnets, quilted satin petticoats and—among the most interesting—a white surah evening dress worn by Dolly Madison while she was mistress of the White House. The collection covers the entire range of costume from slaves to gentlefolk.

Difficult To Trace

Hollywood has promoted interest in historic costumes, and perhaps the screen partly accounts for concentration on style design and a revival of past modes by current fashion designers. Oddly enough, the styles of thirty or forty years ago were more difficult to trace accurately, with their wide variations, than those of preceding decades. This was solved by a clever device. The studios marshalled complete files of all the mail-order catalogues. When it becomes necessary to style a high-stepping gentleman circa 1900, they peg him accurately, peg-top trousers, quart-cup collar and all, No. B-R216345 in the catalogue, $18.65, F. O. B. Chicago.

Movie-goers who have come a long way down the road marvel at the accuracy with which the screen gets the subtlest details of dress of forty or fifty years ago. That's how they do it. It is said that Hollywood has paid some thumping big prices for early-day catalogues, hard to come by. When our street and dress clothes go into the museum of the future, there will be no such wide range as that between buckskin and satin in men's wear. In the process of machine leveling, there are "no more hicks," so far as clothes are concerned. Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Change of Punitive Taxation Course Justifies Predictions by Republicans

BY FRANKLYN WALTMAN

Glory Hallelujah! Let there be rejoicing throughout the land!

President Roosevelt has ended his "sit-down" strike against business. Somewhat grudgingly, but nevertheless affirmatively, the President has given the sign that he is willing to have Congress undertake the task of undoing some of the damage inflicted on business by punitive taxation.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, at long last, has appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee and called attention to the necessity of revising the the federal tax laws along lines which Republicans in Congress have advocated for the last three years

Thus the Republicans again have demonstrated the wisdom and constructive nature of their criticisms of certain New Deal laws. Now, Mr. Morgenthau, as he did several months ago in respect to the Social Security payroll taxes, admits that the Republican position was well taken and was not, as New Dealers as so fond of saying, just obstructive tactics.

It Was Tugwell's Idea

One of the "tax irritants" which Secretary Morgenthau now agrees should be eliminated is the tax on undistributed corporation profits. It will be recalled that Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell first proposed such taxation in his book "Industrial Discipline," written before the New Deal was inaugurated Dr. Tugwell, it will also be recalled, aspired to "make America over." His idea was to subject industry and business to government discipline—the "planned economy" idea. Some people now call it the "planned poverty" idea, since such schemes are responsible for the present 11,000,000 unemployed and the distressingly low level of farm prices.

Anyway, Dr. Tugwell sold his tax idea to another academic braintruster, the late Dr. Herman Oliphant, who was general counsel of the Treasury. Dr. Oliphant sold the idea to Congress and in 1936 it was written into the law. The Republicans on the Ways and Means committee did all they could to prevent enactment of the undistributed profits tax, but their warnings—which were accurately prophetic—were brushed aside.

Look at the Record

Not to say "we told you so" but to keep the record straight, it might be well to call attention to the objections raised in their Minority Report in 1936 by the House Republicans against this tax. They follow:

"1. It will discourage and possibly prevent the accumulation of adequate rainy-day reserves and constitutes a direct threat to the security of business, employment, and investments.

"2. It will cause corporations to restrict the distribution of their existing tax-paid reserves, which can only be rebuilt under penalty.

"3. It will discourage business rehabilitation and expansion and have a retarding effect upon recovery and re-employment.

"4. It will hamper the growth of small corporations, impede the development of new enterprises, and foster monopolies.

"5. It puts a penalty on prudence and a bounty of improvidence and constitutes an unwholesome interference with the exercise of sound judgment in the management of business.

"6. It will accentuate the extremes of future booms and depressions.

"7. It will oppress business burdened with debts and will result in a restriction on corporate credit.

8. It will drive capital out of productive enterprise into tax-exempt securities.

"9. It violates every sound principle of income taxation, is arbitrary and oppressive in its application, and will be unequal and discriminating in its operation.

"10. It will crucify financially weak business enterprises, while permitting the strong to minimize or entirely escape the tax.

"11. It will create inequities and unfair competitive situations which are far greater and more real than the imaginary ones it purports to correct.

"12. It will result in the double taxation of all dividends paid out of reserves, whether accumulated in the past or in the future.

"13. It will cause untold confusion and add bewildering complexities both in the computation and administration of the tax.

"14. It abandons an assured revenue of $1,100,000,000 annually for one purely speculative and uncertain, and which promises to be most disappointing in amount, thereby further jeopardizing the federal revenue."

Warnings Materialized

Think back over the last three years and you will find that all the things which the Republicans in 1936 predicted would happen if this tax were enacted materialized. So unfavorable were the results which followed enactment of the tax that Congress a year ago, against the wishes of the White House, greatly modified its provisions.

But even then Mr. Roosevelt refused to admit his New Deal had made a mistake. Before a bewildered graduating class in the little town of Arthurdale, West Virginia, he severely arraigned the changes made and announced he would let the bill become law without his signature. Now Secretary Morganthau, speaking for the administration, admits that the tax may as well be wiped off the law books altogether.

Thus we make progress—yet if the New Dealers had listened to the Republicans three years ago we might not today be in our present sad plight, and perhaps some of the millions now unemployed would have jobs in private industry. Nevertheless, we repeat: Glory Hallelujah!

Anything but That!

An Editorial from the Rotarian Magazine

Cherished among the many legends of the Spanish-American people of New Mexico is the story of San Ysidro.

It seems that San Ysidro was plowing his garden one Spring day, when an angel appeared and said to him, "The Lord wants see you, Ysidro. Come with me."

Ysidro plowed on. "I can't go now," he answered. "You tell the Lord that I'm late in getting my corn planted and that I'll see Him later when I've finished."

The angel nodded and disappeared.

Soon another messenger hovered about San Ysidro's plow. "The Lord wants to see you right now," he said. "And if you don't come at once, the Lord says He'll send hot winds and drought to wither your corn."

Ysidro paused only long enough to wipe the sweat from his brow. "I've had hot winds and droughts before, and they don't bother me," he said. "I can carry water from the river. Tell the Lord I can't come now, but will see Him when I have my corn planted."

Baffled, that angel, too, vanished.

A few moments later a third angel, larger and sterner than the other two, tapped Ysidro on the shoulder. "The Lord doesn't like your attitude," the heavenly courier said. "He says if you don't come with me right now He'll send a plague of locusts to devour your corn from the top and a plague of cutworms to eat its roots."

"That doesn't frighten me," answered Ysidro, turning his plow and starting back. "I've had plagues before, and with fires and hoeing and hard work, I've saved my corn. You tell the Lord I'll see Him tomorrow."

And so the third angel flew away.

San Ysidro had plowed several furrows before the fourth messenger glided to earth.

"The Lord isn't going to argue any more," the angel announced, flapping his wings hard to keep up with the stubborn plowman. "He simply said that if you don't come with me right away, He'll send you a bad neighbor."

Instantly San Ysidro stopped his mule and wrapped the reins around the plow handle. For the first time there was fear in his eyes.

"A bad neighbor!" he shouted. "No, no! I can stand hot winds and droughts, locusts and cutworms—I can stand anything but a bad neighbor. I'll go with you right now."

Hunt by Murphy Arouses Suspicion

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

New York, N. Y., June 2.—Attorney General Frank Murphy hates political corruption. He rarely passes up a chance to say so for the press. He doesn't need to do that. In the first place, so, too, do most of the rest of the folks even though they take it for granted. It is like saying: "I'm not a thief." In the second place, his whole public record says it a lot louder than he can.

Frank Murphy

Much as we must all admire this sanctified Michigander, his constant broadcasting of his posession of virtues which most of us assume of any decent man, raises two questions. Is it a "holier-than thou" complex and does he think that any group has a monopoly on virtue? If so, he hasn't enough faith in the whole electorate to occupy his office.

That is absurd because, as Michigan's governor, in the sit-down strikes, he put his faith in the eventual return to virtue of flagrant violators of laws he was sworn to enforce—and didn't. That should be condoned because it avoided bloodshed and he saw to it that law and justice prevailed in the end—even if he did dally with his oath registered in Heaven.

He can't be blamed for this and it lets him out of the suspicion of being a man whose self-advertised conscience takes no counsel of his common sense.

O. K. for the first question—Mr. Murphy is no such Pharisee as Christ condemned as a "whited wall." But it raises the second question.

* * *

Propaganda Suspected

Is there, by any chance, any low political propaganda in his travelling about the country, preaching about how if the states and the cities do not purify their elections and their judges, he is going to do it in his self-advertised odor of sanctity and, on that basis, advocate a third term for Mr. Roosevelt?

He boasts that sending Missouri's state boss Pendergast to the pen for evading federal income taxes is merely an incident of a projected general federal purge of our states and cities. In saying that, he indicates that our state governmental systems are so corrupt that our citizens no longer have faith in democracy and that it is therefore part of the "war of democracies on dictatorships" for the federal government to purify them.

Oh, just and righteous God! Is is the reverse of that. We have rotten spots in our states and cities. But it is their constitutional business and not that of the federal government to clean them up. Mr. Dewey, a Republican, as a state officer has done more to clean up local political corruption than Mr. Murphy has ever done or, by any stretch of imagination could ever do, or than it is his business or responsibility or right to attempt. Civic virtue is neither a New Deal monopoly or a Murphy monopoly. If the federal government has a right to discipline local governments for vice, it has a right to discipline them for everything—and we have become a completely centralized government—a federal dictatorship.

Perversion of Justice

Boss Pendergast should have gone to jail under local law for local political corruption. He went for federal tax-evasion. Although the federal judge who sentenced him was brave enough to say, in effect, that a man should not be tried for one crime and sentenced for another, Mr. Murphy is now boasting that exactly this was done. If so it is a perversion of justice and constitutional rights, discernitable to both Mr. Murphy's piety and his jurisprudence.

If Mr. Murphy is on a true hunt for the biggest and most dangerous areas of political corruption, he will investigate not local, but federal corruption—WPA political activities and the present federal adulteration of the purity of the ballot—both federal and local—through political handouts and compulsive use of taxpayer's money. He will demand that the House enact the Senate bill to keep relief out of politics—especially in WPA—in advance of the 1940 campaign. Will he do that? Will a fox ever smell its own den first? And where does that leave our sanctimonious attorney general? It leaves him as just another demagogue plucking motes out of others' eyes with beams in his own.—Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

Capital Must Be Encouraged

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat

Overspeculation is a bad thing for the country, as we learned to our sorrow in 1929, but underspeculation is also a bad thing. We have been so intent on preventing a recurrence of 1929 that we are now sunk in the apathy of persistent underspeculation.

Whereever these matters are discussed, one fact emerges concerning which there can be no disagreement. That fact is this: Venture capital must be encouraged; otherwise it will not venture. No sane man will run the risk of losing all his capital unless he has reason to believe he has at least a gambler's chance to make a sizable profit.

In other words, no man who has money is likely to risk it solely for the purpose of being able to pay Uncle Sam a high income tax.

Eastern Shore Pea Crop Hit by Drouth

Ridgely, Md., June 2 (AP)—A five-week drouth in this Eastern Shore section has caused widespread damage to the 1939 pea crop and the harvest probably will be about a third of the normal, an agricultural expert predicted today.

Albert White, superintendent of the Ridgely experimental substation of the University of Maryland, said the crop in this vicinity had been damaged about 50 per cent. Even a light rain would develop many of the empty pods on the vines, however, and local growers are hoping a break in the drouth will save them hundreds of dollars.

The May rainfall was .70 inches, the lightest since the experimental station started keeping records in 193.

The first of the pea crop was started to the canneries this week.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for June 4 is Acts 21:27 to 23:11; 24:10 to 26:32, the Golden Text being Acts 23:1. "I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.")

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

TODAY we review some of the most stirring episodes in Paul's adventurous career. The story starts at Caesarea, where Paul spent happy days at the house of Philip, the evangelist.

This man had four unmarried daughters who had the gift of prophesying. A prophet named Agabus also visited at Philip's house, and while there he took Paul's girdle and bound his own hands and feet, and told Paul that what would happen to him if he went on to Jerusalem as he planned. Following that all these friends united in trying to persuade Paul not to go to Jerusalem. But Paul was adamant, however, and answered them, "What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus Christ."

So Paul took some of the disciples from Caesarea with him and went to Jerusalem and was gladly received into the house of Mnason of Cyprus. Next day he called together all the disciples and told them what he had been doing and why then told him how the people of the city were bitter against him, and had been telling every one that he taught the Jews that they were to forsake Moses and the old Jewish laws.

They then advised him to take four men with him, and all five were to purify themselves before going to the temple, and to show in every way that they were obedient to these laws. So Paul did as they counseled, but to no avail. As soon as he entered the temple there was a hue and cry and many laid violent hands on him, crying out that he was the heretic. They threw him out of the temple and would have killed him but for the chief captain, who took his soldiers and centurions and rescued Paul and brought him to the castle, and there bound him with chains. His enemies followed, shouting, "Away with him."

Bound as he was, Paul stood on the stairs and told all those present that he was a Jew; how he had formerly persecuted the Christians, and how he was converted. His enemies, however, were unimpressed, and cried out to slay such a man; he was not fit to live. So the chief captain told his soldiers to bind him, and "that he should be examined by scourging," which might have resembled our "third degree." But Paul said to him, "Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman and uncondemned?"

When the centurion heard that he told the chief captain, who ordered him loosed from his bonds and commanded the chief priests and all those who accused him to appear next day.

When Paul was brought before the council he commenced his defense by using the words that are today's Golden Text, "Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day."

Here the high priest, whose name was Ananias, told those standing nearest to Paul to strike him on the mouth, whereat Paul said to him, "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?"

Then Paul told them that he was a Pharisee, and that the Pharisees and Sadducees disputed together about the resurrection, and that he preached it. Whereupon these two sects got into such an argument that the chief captain, fearing that Paul would be torn to pieces among them, took him again to the castle.

That night he had a vision of the Lord, who told him to be of good cheer, for as he had borne witness to the faith in Jerusalem, so he would have to bear it in Rome.

Next day certain Jews banded together and vowed that they would neither eat nor sleep until they had taken Paul's life. But his nephew heard them and went to the chief captain, who ordered his centurions to take 200 soldiers, "horsemen three score and ten, and spearmen 200, at the third hour of the night." They were told to take Paul to Caesarea to the governor, Felix. So it was done, and Paul's life was again saved.

Once more Paul made his defense against his accusers. Felix could not find that Paul had done anything worthy of death, but being a politician, he was willing to please the Jews, so kept Paul bound, especially as Paul had no money to give him. Thus two years passed with Paul in prison. Then Felix invited King Agrippa, ruler of some territory in the northeastern part of Palestine, to visit him and hear what Paul had to say.

So Paul told his story, from his persecution of the Christians to his own conversion when the vision of the Lord came to him, and King Agrippa was much moved, saying to him, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."

Paul having cited his Roman citizenship, however, was compelled to go to Rome to have his final trial, so he was put on a ship, which had many adventures, including shipwreck. Paul finally arrived in Rome, where he was allowed to have his own house and was permitted to preach the Gospel for two years.

Paul Pleads His Own Case — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Acts 21:27 to 23:11; 24:10 to 26:32.

Paul's friends at Cesarea warned him not to go to Jerusalem, telling him that he surely would be bound and imprisoned, but Paul said he was ready to be persecuted and even to die for the name of the Lord Jesus.

So Paul went to Jerusalem and entered the temple, after purifying himself according to the Jewish law; but the Jews cried out against him and would have killed him, had not the captain of the Centurions rescued him.

Paul defended himself, telling of his conversion, but so bitter were the Jews that some vowed they would neither eat nor drink until they had slain him. However, his nephew told the captain of this threat, and Paul was taken away.

Paul's judges could find nothing in his conduct worthy of death, and King Agrippa said to him, after listening to his defense, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."

TODAY we review some of the most stirring episodes in Paul's adventurous career. The story starts at Caesarea, where Paul spent happy days at the house of Philip, the evangelist.

This man had four unmarried daughters who had the gift of prophesying. A prophet named Agabus also visited at Philip's house, and while there he took Paul's girdle and bound his own hands and feet, and told Paul that what would happen to him if he went on to Jerusalem as he planned. Following that all these friends united in trying to persuade Paul not to go to Jerusalem. But Paul was adamant, however, and answered them, "What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus Christ."

So Paul took some of the disciples from Caesarea with him and went to Jerusalem and was gladly received into the house of Mnason of Cyprus. Next day he called together all the disciples and told them what he had been doing and they then told him how the people in the city were bitter against Paul and had been telling every Jew that he taught the Jews that they were to forsake Moses and avoid Jewish laws.

They then advised him to take four men with him, and all five were to purify themselves before going to the temple, and to show every way that they were obedient to these laws. So Paul did as they counseled, but to no avail. As soon as he entered the temple there was a hue and cry and many laid violent hands on him, crying out that he was the heretic. They threw him out of the temple and would have killed him but for the chief captain, who took his soldiers and centurions and rescued Paul and brought him to the castle, and there bound him with chains. His enemies followed, shouting, "Away with him."

Bound as he was, Paul stood on the stairs and told all those present that he was a Jew; how he had formerly persecuted the Christians and how he was converted. His enemies, however, were unimpressed, and cried out to slay such a man; he was not fit to live. So the chief captain told his soldiers to bind him, and "that he should be examined by scourging," which must have resembled our "third degree." But Paul said to him, "Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman and unconvicted?"

When the centurion heard that he told the chief captain, who ordered him loosed from his bonds and commanded the chief priests and all those who accused him to appear next day.

When Paul was brought before the council he commenced his defense by using the words that are today's Golden Text, "Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day."

Here the high priest, whose name was Ananias, told those standing nearest to Paul to strike him on the mouth, whereat Paul said to him, "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?"

Then Paul told them that he was a Pharisee, and that the Pharisees and Sadducees disputed together about the resurrection, and that he preached it. Whereupon these two sects got into such an argument that the chief captain, fearing that Paul would be torn to pieces among them, took him again to the castle.

That night he had a vision of the Lord, who told him to be of good cheer, for as he had borne witness to the faith in Jerusalem, so he would have to bear it in Rome.

Next day certain Jews banded together and vowed that they would neither eat nor sleep until they had taken Paul's life. But his nephew heard them and went to the chief captain, who ordered his centurions to take 200 soldiers, "horsemen three score and ten, and spearmen 200, at the third hour of the night." They were told to take Paul to Caesarea to the governor, Felix. So it was done, and Paul's life was again saved.

Once more Paul made his defense against his accusers. Felix could not find that Paul had done anything worthy of death, but being a politician, he was willing to please the Jews, so kept Paul bound, especially as Paul had no money to give him. Thus two years passed with Paul in prison. Then Felix invited King Agrippa, ruler of some territory in the northeastern part of Palestine, to visit him and hear what Paul had to say.

So Paul told his story, from his persecution of the Christians to his own conversion when the vision of the Lord came to him, and King Agrippa was much moved, saying to him, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."

Paul having cited his Roman citizenship, however, was compelled to go to Rome to have his final trial, so he was put on a ship, which had many adventures, including shipwreck. Paul finally arrived in Rome, where he was allowed to have his own house and was permitted to preach the Gospel for two years.

Paul Pleads His Own Case — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Acts 21:27 to 23:11; 24:10 to 26:32. By Alfred J. Buescher

Paul's friends at Cesarea warned him not to go to Jerusalem, telling him that he surely would be bound and imprisoned, but Paul said he was ready to be persecuted and even to die for the name of the Lord Jesus.

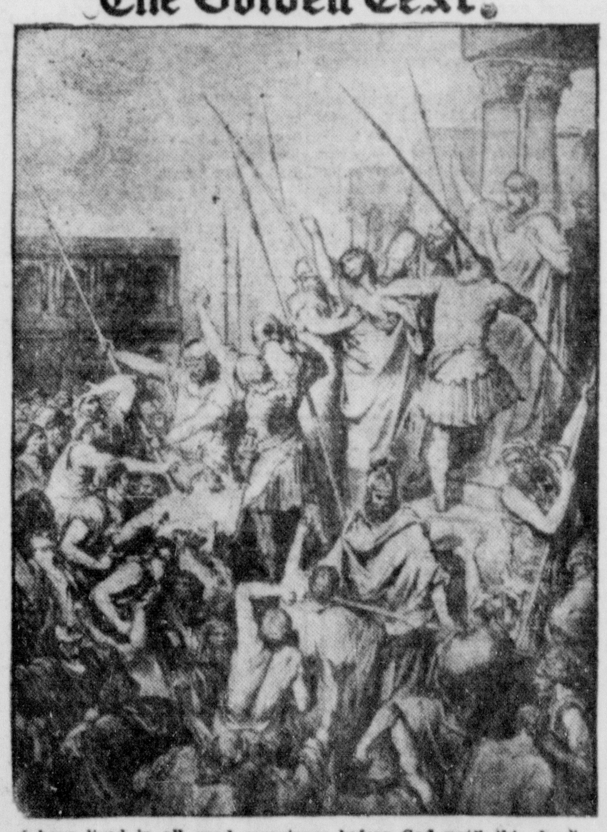

So Paul went to Jerusalem and entered the temple, after purifying himself according to the Jewish law; but the Jews cried out against him and would have killed him, had not the captain of the Centurions rescued him.

Paul defended himself, telling of his conversion, but so bitter were the Jews that some vowed they would neither eat nor drink until they had slain him. However, his nephew told the captain of this threat, and Paul was taken away.

Paul's judges could find nothing in his conduct worthy of death, and King Agrippa said to him, after listening to his defense, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."

Eastern Shore Pea Crop Hit by Drouth

Ridgely, Md., June 2 (AP)—A five-week drouth in this Eastern Shore section has caused widespread damage to the 1939 pea crop and the harvest probably will be about a third of the normal, an agricultural expert predicted today.

Albert White, superintendent of the Ridgely experimental substation of the University of Maryland, said the crop in this vicinity had been damaged about 50 per cent. Even a light rain would develop many of the empty pods on the vines, however, and local growers are hoping a break in the drouth will save them hundreds of dollars.

The May rainfall was .76 inches, the lightest since the experimental station started keeping records in 193.

The first of the pea crop was started to the canneries this week.

HEED YOUR PARTNER

IT IS NO FUN to pick discards while the opponent is running a long suit. The slightest mistake can give him one or more extra tricks. But if your partner decides to let go of one suit to protect another, you should listen to the message of his cards and govern your own play accordingly. In many cases the declarer can be beaten by such teamwork, whereas he would have an easy path otherwise.

North opened this deal with 1-Club. South then bid 1-Diamond, North 1-Spade, South 2-No Trump, North 3-Clubs and South 3-No Trump. West opened the heart Q. then led the heart 5 to the K, and declarer took the third heart with the A. Then followed five club tricks by South. West had to make the first discard. He threw the spade 4 so that he could hold to his thirteenth heart and his four diamonds, a suit which South had bid. This should have indicated to East that his partner would guard the diamond suit, and East therefore should have clung to his spades. But he did not. He also held to four diamonds to protect that suit and thus tossed off spades, whereupon the declarer got four spade tricks, making 4-No Trump.

Had East tossed diamonds, the two times he had to discard on clubs, and held to his spades, the declarer would have been unable to take more than eight tricks.

Of course, if East, after taking the second heart, had laid down his diamond A to see what signal his partner would give him, the contract would have been set two.

SYNOPSIS

SARAH ANNE MELTON, minister's daughter and close friend of JUDITH DRAKE, daughter of luxury, had a childhood romance with JACK COURTNEY, who attains sudden fame by flying the Pacific.

* * *

CHAPTER TWO

STANDING IN the alcove in the parsonage hall, clutching the receiver with one hand, Sarah Anne felt her slender body trembling.

Some place, hundreds of miles away, Jack Courtney was holding a telephone, too. He was calling her. Over the mountains, through the tunnels, across the prairies and cities and rural roads, their voices would speak to each other.

"Miss Melton?" That was a strange voice. Besides, Jack would have said, "Sally Anne," or "Honey, I did it!" This must be a secretary for one of the airways or a promotion man. Some earth-bound individual who looked after prosaic details for the men who flew. He was putting the number through for Jack.

"Yes, speaking," she answered.

"Miss Melton, I'm Ted Evans of the Dispatch. I won't waste time on formalities. Would you tell me, please, when you and Jack Courtney are to be married?"

She did not answer at once. The astonishing question took her breath and she dropped into the chair at the telephone table.

"Will you say that again, very slowly?" she asked.

"Why?"

"Because it's news to me!"

If a newspaper man thought he would trick her into a revelation in order to provide a romantic background for Jack, that newspaper man could go write about the weather in Hawaii!

"You mean you are not engaged?" Either the man belonged on the stage from the feigned surprise in his voice, or he had believed in his own question.

"Just where did you get that idea?" she asked.

"From Courtney. Where else could we?"

"From Jack?" Had he let his brother flyers know that there was a girl named Sarah Anne Melton, a small-town minister's daughter who taught the third grade— But if he had, she was not supposed to know it. There was a bridge, two years long, which she and Jack must cross to find each other, only sometimes you could fly across a void.

"Are you still there?" the man persisted. "How shall I quote you?"

"Not at all, please. Jack is a very dear, very old friend, and I'm gloriously glad about his flight. That's all, and your sentimental notions should be knocked into a cocked hat!"

She spoke quickly.

"Where did you get my name?"

"Sister, no one on this golden coast knows you but the flying guy! Where else could we get it?"

Where else? Then Jack must have made some idle remark in which he used her name, and the press had magnified it. But it meant that she mattered in some way, small though it might be.

She even laughed happily into the telephone. "You ask Jack anything you wish to know. And I don't think he has any romantic ideas either."

She hung up. She was weak. She had not heard the voice for which she was listening, but somewhere, somehow, Jack remembered.

The mention of her name was such a flimsy thing on which to build, yet it was a living, breathing, shining contact. Her eyes became wider, star-filled, dark as long nights. She brushed her black hair until its curls were a misty cloud around the small oval of her face. She had planned to wear a simple linen frock with a row of white buttons, but now she slipped a white chiffon from its hanger. It was light as Jack's own clouds, and there were threads of gold caught in the shimmering folds. This was a gala night and she must wear a festive dress.

So it happened that Bing Wells, who never before had spoken to her except to say the dozen conventional phrases with which people carry on a necessary conversation with someone who must be spoken to, noticed her and came to sit near her.

"What did you say?" Sarah Anne repeated.

"What's happened?" he asked. "A new kind of cold cream, false eyelashes—"

"My skin always was good," she answered laughingly, "and my eyelashes grew that way. Nothin's happened."

"It has. You're radiant."

"School's out next week and the whole third grade is passing."

"A lot you care about a lot of youngsters stepping up a year. You have a secret—"

Bing was slim and dark and he had a small mustache that gave him an air of detachment. He had been devoted to Judith for a long time, and Sarah Anne had wondered why she liked him. Judith was so strong, so capable, and the man was not of the same stuff. Judith was as tall as he was. But where there was strength in her slim body he had indolence, weakness.

Mrs. Allen, with her brusque frankness, had mentioned the matter once. "The man's weak. Oh, harmless enough, except that he saps somebody else's strength. Seems to me that's pretty bad. But now and then people like it. Maybe Judith has a maternal complex about the man."

"Maybe . . ." Sarah Anne had agreed. Judith needs valor, courage, strength in the man she loved. Why Judith accepted Bing, remained a mystery. She smiled about him, she said openly that he was amusing, that was all. But she went to church with him, to the town movies, to the concerts.

Now for the first time the man discovered Sarah Anne. The party was ending. The wood fire, for the June night was cool, had blazed high and riotously, then died. The long table had lost its beauty of candles and its silver trays of salads and sandwiches and ices and cakes.

Bing looked at Sarah Anne and smiled suddenly. He had a radiant smile. His eyes crinkled, his white teeth flashed, his face laughed. "Suppose you let me drive you home and tell me about Treasure Island," he suggested.

"The new land you found today?"

"There aren't any new lands. Columbus and Balboa got all of them." How could she say: It isn't a land, it's a path. A shining, silver cord between the stars, and it isn't even mine! It's just the way a brave boy took across a wide sea. But you wouldn't know. You sit at a desk in an office in the steel mill which Judith's father owns. . . . No, she couldn't talk like that. So she asked a question instead:

"Why do you want to take me home? You brought Judith—"

He shook his head slowly, that twinkle still dancing in his eyes. "Wrong, Sarah Anne! Judith brought me in her chariot."

"Then you better climb in, for I came in Gentle Annie—that's the parsonage car and it won't go above 30 miles. That's why Corrinne dubbed her that. "Then, as he raised his brows, "Corrinne's my sister—just 18, and she looks like Judith only she's gold instead of red-gold. See you later."

Judith stopped her, and the dark, bright eyes were laughing. "Darling, let the lad have his fun. Run on with him, please! I don't mind." She lowered her voice. "I don't want to go home. I'm taking my ship up and he's excess baggage. Please, Sally Anne."

"All right." She didn't want him, either, and if he knew that, he wouldn't have stood there so nonchalantly sure that he was the brass ring for which the merry-go-round played its calliope.

The old car chugged along methodically. Bing kept up his bantering. Suddenly he said, "I did you a good turn today. I wanted to get thanked for it."

"Did me a good turn?" The car swayed, then came back to the road between the maples which lined the southern part of the little city.

"I was over at the newspaper office today when the telephone call from the coast came through asking about Jack's devotions. He must be some guy. He left before I came to town."

She waited. So there had been a call to the paper, too? Why?

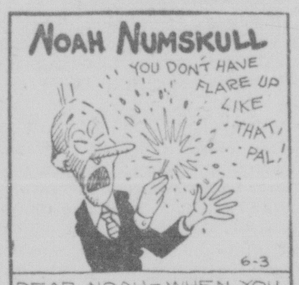

"Some wire service wanted to know if there was any girl waiting for him. It seems he yelled to the men to lay off when he hopped out of his ship. Don't blame him. He'd taken an ocean in his stride. So they called up here. The desk men were all out in the composing room so I took the call. I gave you a break. Thought you might like to see your picture in the paper and I've heard Judy say he carried your books home from school—"

"What did you say?" This cool, small voice was coming from somewhere deep inside her. It wasn't Jack who had remembered, who let her name slip out . . .

"What did you say?" she repeated, while the night grew quiet, clouds lowered, and stars blew away. "Hurry!"

Strawberry Preserves

Preserving is one of the best ways to keep some of the season's luscious strawberries for winter use. Select only the medium-sized, firm, richly flavored ripe berries and prepare them according to the following recipe:

Boil slowly two cups of sugar and one cup of water without stirring until it spins a thread three inches long. Then add two cups of berries slowly and boil for 10 minutes. Add two more cups of sugar and two more cups of berries and boil for 10 minues longer. Finally, put into hot glasses and seal. For a different flavor, the juice of one-half a lemon may be added during the boiling.

Sweet Potato Biscuits

To the many popular hot bread recipies add this one for sweet potato bread. The following ingredients will make 16 small biscuits: one cup flour, three-fourths cup mashed sweet potatoes, one-fourth cup milk, four tablespoons butter, two and a half teaspoons baking powder and three-fourths teaspoon salt.

Mix and sift the dry ingredients and rub the butter into them. Combine the sweet potatoes and milk and add them to the dry ingredients. Stir just enough to moisten dry ingredients, then turn the dough onto a floured board and knead lightly for a few seconds. Then roll the dough out to about one-half inch in thickness and cut with biscuit cutter. Next place the biscuits in a buttered baking pan, brush with milk and bake in a very hot oven for 15 minutes or until the bread is a golden brown.

ELBOW Elegance

By HELEN FOLLETT

SUMMER means short sleeves, arms out in the open. It is time for an elbow survey. You've probably never seen yours; few girls have. Feel of them. Like nutmeg graters, we bet. Most of them are.

The friction of sleeves makes them grey. To bring a better color, cup your elbow in half a lemon and twist the lemon around. Wait a few minutes until the juice dries on, then massage briskly with cold cream or cleansing oil. Pat on borated talcum to form a pack, slip into your nighty, say prayers and go to bed.

In the morning bathe the arms with warm water, soap and a heavy brush, rinse, dry and friction with eau de cologne.

Wife Preservers

Worn rugs can be cleaned satisfactorily by first vacuuming them, then washing with a clean, damp mop, as you would linoleum, using a mild soap solution, then clear water rinse, and wringing the mop by hand. The rug will look clean and fresh.

Raspberry Cakes

Instead of the usual raspberries and cream for breakfast, raspberry griddle cakes will prove a delicious variation. The ingredients needed are: one egg, one cup milk, one cup flour, one-half cup ripe raspberries, two teaspoons baking powder and one-fourth teaspoon salt.

Beat the egg until light and add the salt and milk. Sift the baking powder and flour and stir into the first mixture. Next fold in the raspberries and bake on a hot griddle. Either butter or a sugar sirup makes a suitable spread.

Wings of Youth

SYNOPSIS

SARAH ANNE MELTON, minister's daughter and close friend of JUDITH DRAKE, daughter of luxury, had a childhood romance with JACK COURTNEY, who attains sudden fame by flying the Pacific.

* * *

CHAPTER TWO

STANDING IN the alcove in the parsonage hall, clutching the receiver with one hand, Sarah Anne felt her slender body trembling.

Some place, hundreds of miles away, Jack Courtney was holding a telephone, too. He was calling her. Over the mountains, through the tunnels, across the prairies and cities and rural roads, their voices would speak to each other.

"Miss Melton?" That was a strange voice. Besides, Jack would have said, "Sally Anne," or "Honey, I did it!" This must be a secretary for one of the airways or a promotion man. Some earth-bound individual who looked after prosaic details for the men who flew. He was putting the number through for Jack.

"Yes, speaking," she answered.

"Miss Melton, I'm Ted Evans of the Dispatch. I won't waste time on formalities. Would you tell me, please, when you and Jack Courtney are to be married?"

She did not answer at once. The astonishing question took her breath and she dropped into the chair at the telephone table.

"Will you say that again, very slowly?" she asked.

"Why?"

"Because it's news to me!"

If a newspaper man thought he would trick her into a revelation in order to provide a romantic background for Jack, that newspaper man could go write about the weather in Hawaii!

"You mean you are not engaged?" Either the man belonged on the stage from the feigned surprise in his voice, or he had believed in his own question.

"Just where did you get that idea?" she asked.

"From Courtney. Where else could we?"

"From Jack?" Had he let his brother flyers know that there was a girl named Sarah Anne Melton, a small-town minister's daughter who taught the third grade— But if he had, she was not supposed to know it. There was a bridge, two years long, which she and Jack must cross to find each other, only sometimes you could fly across a void.

"Are you still there?" the man persisted. "How shall I quote you?"

"Not at all, please. Jack is a very dear, very old friend, and I'm gloriously glad about his flight. That's all, and your sentimental notions should be knocked into a cocked hat!"

She spoke quickly.

"Where did you get my name?"

"Sister, no one on this golden coast knows you but the flying guy! Where else could we get it?"

Where else? Then Jack must have made some idle remark in which he used her name, and the press had magnified it. But it meant that she mattered in some way, small though it might be.

She even laughed happily into the telephone. "You ask Jack anything you wish to know. And I don't think he has any romantic ideas either."

She hung up. She was weak. She had not heard the voice for which she was listening, but somewhere, somehow, Jack remembered.

The mention of her name was such a flimsy thing on which to build, yet it was a living, breathing, shining contact. Her eyes became wider, star-filled, dark as long nights. She brushed her black hair until its curls were a misty cloud around the small oval of her face. She had planned to wear a simple linen frock with a row of white buttons, but now she slipped a white chiffon from its hanger. It was light as Jack's own clouds, and there were threads of gold caught in the shimmering folds. This was a gala night and she must wear a festive dress.

So it happened that Bing Wells, who never before had spoken to her except to say the dozen conventional phrases with which people carry on a necessary conversation with someone who must be spoken to, noticed her and came to sit near her.

"What did you say?" Sarah Anne repeated.

"What's happened?" he asked. "A new kind of cold cream, false eyelashes—"

"My skin always was good," she answered laughingly, "and my eyelashes grew that way. Nothin's happened."

"It has. You're radiant."

"School's out next week and the whole third grade is passing."

"A lot you care about a lot of youngsters stepping up a year. You have a secret—"

Bing was slim and dark and he had a small mustache that gave him an air of detachment. He had been devoted to Judith for a long time, and Sarah Anne had wondered why she liked him. Judith was so strong, so capable, and the man was not of the same stuff. Judith was as tall as he was. But where there was strength in her slim body he had indolence, weakness.

Mrs. Allen, with her brusque frankness, had mentioned the matter once. "The man's weak. Oh, harmless enough, except that he saps somebody else's strength. Seems to me that's pretty bad. But now and then people like it. Maybe Judith has a maternal complex about the man."

"Maybe . . ." Sarah Anne had agreed. Judith needs valor, courage, strength in the man she loved. Why Judith accepted Bing, remained a mystery. She smiled about him, she said openly that he was amusing, that was all. But she went to church with him, to the town movies, to the concerts.

Now for the first time the man discovered Sarah Anne. The party was ending. The wood fire, for the June night was cool, had blazed high and riotously, then died. The long table had lost its beauty of candles and its silver trays of salads and sandwiches and ices and cakes.

Bing looked at Sarah Anne and smiled suddenly. He had a radiant smile. His eyes crinkled, his white teeth flashed, his face laughed. "Suppose you let me drive you home and tell me about Treasure Island," he suggested.

"The new land you found today?"

"There aren't any new lands. Columbus and Balboa got all of them." How could she say: It isn't a land, it's a path. A shining, silver cord between the stars, and it isn't even mine! It's just the way a brave boy took across a wide sea. But you wouldn't know. You sit at a desk in an office in the steel mill which Judith's father owns. . . . No, she couldn't talk like that. So she asked a question instead:

"Why do you want to take me home? You brought Judith—"

He shook his head slowly, that twinkle still dancing in his eyes. "Wrong, Sarah Anne! Judith brought me in her chariot."

"Then you better climb in, for I came in Gentle Annie—that's the parsonage car and it won't go above 30 miles. That's why Corrinne dubbed her that. "Then, as he raised his brows, "Corrinne's my sister—just 18, and she looks like Judith only she's gold instead of red-gold. See you later."

Judith stopped her, and the dark, bright eyes were laughing. "Darling, let the lad have his fun. Run on with him, please! I don't mind." She lowered her voice. "I don't want to go home. I'm taking my ship up and he's excess baggage. Please, Sally Anne."

"All right." She didn't want him, either, and if he knew that, he wouldn't have stood there so nonchalantly sure that he was the brass ring for which the merry-go-round played its calliope.

The old car chugged along methodically. Bing kept up his bantering. Suddenly he said, "I did you a good turn today. I wanted to get thanked for it."

"Did me a good turn?" The car swayed, then came back to the road between the maples which lined the southern part of the little city.

"I was over at the newspaper office today when the telephone call from the coast came through asking about Jack's devotions. He must be some guy. He left before I came to town."

She waited. So there had been a call to the paper, too? Why?

"Some wire service wanted to know if there was any girl waiting for him. It seems he yelled to the men to lay off when he hopped out of his ship. Don't blame him. He'd taken an ocean in his stride. So they called up here. The desk men were all out in the composing room so I took the call. I gave you a break. Thought you might like to see your picture in the paper and I've heard Judy say he carried your books home from school—"

"What did you say?" This cool, small voice was coming from somewhere deep inside her. It wasn't Jack who had remembered, who let her name slip out . . .

"What did you say?" she repeated, while the night grew quiet, clouds lowered, and stars blew away. "Hurry!"

ELBOW Elegance

By HELEN FOLLETT

SUMMER means short sleeves, arms out in the open. It is time for an elbow survey. You've probably never seen yours; few girls have. Feel of them. Like nutmeg graters, we bet. Most of them are.

The friction of sleeves makes them grey. To bring a better color, cup your elbow in half a lemon and twist the lemon around. Wait a few minutes until the juice dries on, then massage briskly with cold cream or cleansing oil. Pat on borated talcum to form a pack, slip into your nighty, say prayers and go to bed.

In the morning bathe the arms with warm water, soap and a heavy brush, rinse, dry and friction with eau de cologne.

"The Authority on Authorities"

HEED YOUR PARTNER

IT IS NO FUN to pick discards while the opponent is running a long suit. The slightest mistake can give him one or more extra tricks. But if your partner decides to let go of one suit to protect another, you should listen to the message of his cards and govern your own play accordingly. In many cases the declarer can be beaten by such teamwork, whereas he would have an easy path otherwise.

♠ Q 6 4 ♡ Q J 9 5 ◇ K 9 6 5 ♣ 9 7	N W E S	♠ J 8 3 ♡ K 8 7 ◇ A Q 7 2 ♣ 6 5 2
	♠ 10 9 2 ♡ A 6 3 ◇ J 8 4 3 ♣ A K 4

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

North opened this deal with 1-Club. South then bid 1-Diamond, North 1-Spade, South 2-No Trump, North 3-Clubs and South 3-No Trump. West opened the heart Q. then led the heart 5 to the K, and declarer took the third heart with the A. Then followed five club tricks by South. West had to make the first discard. He threw the spade 4 so that he could hold to his thirteenth heart and his four diamonds, a suit which South had bid. This should have indicated to East that his partner would guard the diamond suit, and East therefore should have clung to his spades. But he did not. He also held to four diamonds to protect that suit and thus tossed off spades, whereupon the declarer got four spade tricks, making 4-No Trump.

Had East tossed diamonds, the two times he had to discard on clubs, and held to his spades, the declarer would have been unable to take more than eight tricks.

Of course, if East, after taking the second heart, had laid down his diamond A to see what signal his partner would give him, the contract would have been set two.

Strawberry Preserves

Preserving is one of the best ways to keep some of the season's luscious strawberries for winter use. Select only the medium-sized, firm, richly flavored ripe berries and prepare them according to the following recipe:

Boil slowly two cups of sugar and one cup of water without stirring until it spins a thread three inches long. Then add two cups of berries slowly and boil for 10 minutes. Add two more cups of sugar and two more cups of berries and boil for 10 minues longer. Finally, put into hot glasses and seal. For a different flavor, the juice of one-half a lemon may be added during the boiling.

Sweet Potato Biscuits

To the many popular hot bread recipies add this one for sweet potato bread. The following ingredients will make 16 small biscuits: one cup flour, three-fourths cup mashed sweet potatoes, one-fourth cup milk, four tablespoons butter, two and a half teaspoons baking powder and three-fourths teaspoon salt.

Mix and sift the dry ingredients and rub the butter into them. Combine the sweet potatoes and milk and add them to the dry ingredients. Stir just enough to moisten dry ingredients, then turn the dough onto a floured board and knead lightly for a few seconds. Then roll the dough out to about one-half inch in thickness and cut with biscuit cutter. Next place the biscuits in a buttered baking pan, brush with milk and bake in a very hot oven for 15 minutes or until the bread is a golden brown.

Stocks Decline after Early Rally Gives Way to Small Decline at Close

Average Is Off Slightly in Particularly Dull Market

BY FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, June 2 (AP)—The stock market worked up a moderate rallying urge today but forenoon gains running to a point or more were stopped down to minor fractions in the majority of cases at the close.

Traders had little to go on in the way of inspiring news and the mild nibbling of buyers was attributed partly to the belief of most that Thursday's sell-off may have provided a needed "correction" after the lengthy advance.

Dealings were the slowest for a full session since May 15. Transactions totalled 397,040 shares against 1,540 the day before. The Associated Press average of 60 issues managed to retain net improvement of 2 of a point at 47.2.

Steels were supported on reports additional upturn in mill operations was a nearby probability. Motors kept above water despite a drop of 25,295 units in this week's automobile output.

Improved sales volumes for good chains bolstered stocks in that group.

Demand in the curb was standard Steel Spring, ahead at 4 at the finish. Mead Johnson gained 4 on light turnover and additionally up were Lockheed and Eagle Petroleum. Turnover of 7,000 shares compared with 89,000 Thursday.

How to slope edges of living lawn

Most people shape the strip of lawn along a driveway by cutting straight down with a turf cutter. This leaves a "straight-edge" of lawn with grass roots exposed. The proper way to edge a lawn down to a driveway is to slope it.

A practical method of sloping the edge of a living lawn is shown in the illustration. With a long-narrow-bladed shovel remove the earth back under the sharp edge of the lawn to a depth of eight inches. Then carefully bend down the "thinned" edge of lawn and shape it into position on a lavel with the driveway. Once this is down a lawn roller can be used to even it out and firm it into position. This done, the lawn should be watered frequently until the roots have taken hold again in their new location.

The Panama Canal Zone, bought for $53,500,000, is the most expensive purchase of territory ever made by the United States.

One Dead Eight Hurt In Ice Plant Blast

Bellevue, O., June 2 (AP)—One man was killed and at least eight were injured last night in an explosion at the City Ice and Fuel Co., plant here.

The Bellevue Hospital said the dead man was Donald Ice, an employ of the plant.

Eight persons were admitted to the hospital. Attaches said they were suffering from being overcome by ammonia fumes and other injuries.

George C. Massig, an employ of the Bellevue Gazette, said that two boilers at the plant blew up, "carrying the ammonia plant with it."

How to slope edges of living lawn

Most people shape the strip of lawn along a driveway by cutting straight down with a turf cutter. This leaves a "straight-edge" of lawn with grass roots exposed. The proper way to edge a lawn down to a driveway is to slope it.

A practical method of sloping the edge of a living lawn is shown in the illustration. With a long-narrow-bladed shovel remove the earth back under the sharp edge of the lawn to a depth of eight inches. Then carefully bend down the "thinned" edge of lawn and shape it into position on a lavel with the driveway. Once this is down a lawn roller can be used to even it out and firm it into posi-tion. This done, the lawn should be watered frequently until the roots have taken hold again in their new location.

The Panama Canal Zone, bought for $53,500,000, is the most expen-sive purchase of territory ever made by the United States.

One Dead Eight Hurt In Ice Plant Blast

Bellevue, O., June 2 (AP)—One man was killed and at least eight were injured last night in an explosion at the City Ice and Fuel Co., plant here.

The Bellevue Hospital said the dead man was Donald Ice, an employ of the plant.

Eight persons were admitted to the hospital. Attaches said they were suffering from being overcome by ammonia fumes and other in-juries.

A Bride's First Biscuits Can Be Swell

For the bride's first cake here's one that's aptly named—Ambrosia.

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

Mrs. Newly-wed, you don't believe that your first biscuits are going to be like lead, do you? You'd better not.

Psychologists probably would tell you they'd come out that way if you had that frame of mind. But, skipping the psychologists, take the word of a cook—if you follow the rules carefully, there's no reason you shouldn't produce feathery, rich biscuits for the first dinner in your new home.

We'll start with biscuits just because they are a traditional bugaboo. And we have a better reason, too; they can be the mainspring of lots of other dishes. We'll meet those as we go along. Now for the biscuits:

* * *

Sift some flour, regular bread flour. Then measure out a cupful, put it in a bowl and add two teaspoons of baking powder and a quarter of a teaspoon of salt. (We might mention that cooking measurements are all level, unless otherwise noted in a recipe.)

Take two tablespoons of fat—one each of lard and butter is a good combination, though you can use all lard—and then take a knife and cut the fat into the dry ingredients until the mixture resembles coarse corn meal. (If you mix it too fine, your biscuits will not bake fluffy.)

* * *

Now, mixing continuously with your knife, slowly pour in about a third of a cup of milk. Some flour will take a little more milk, some a little less, so add the milk slowly until your dough is quite soft, but not sticky or shiny.

Next roll the dough into a ball with your hands, then press it out with your knuckles until you have a sheet about half-an-inch thick. Cut out your biscuits, lay them side by side in an ungreased pan, bake them in a moderately hot (425 degrees) oven about 12 minutes and there you are.

* * *

Suppose you want to dress up a creamed main dish — creamed vegetables, meat, fish or chicken. Make some biscuit dough, pat it out a little thinner than you would for regular biscuits and cut your biscuit shapes smaller. Now put your creamed meat or fish into a shallow, buttered baking dish, then put your little biscuits over the top and bake the whole thing 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

* * *

Pot pie is a man's dish. Your biscuit skill comes in handy in preparing them, too. Make a quarter-inch-thick layer of dough and use that to line a small, shallow ings you can use—creamed mushrooms, creamed peas, creamed eggs; meat or fish in a savory sauce, or green beans in a cheese sauce. Fill your biscuit lining with your chosen mixture and top it all with rings of biscuit dough, shaped with a doughnut cutter. Bake this 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

* * *

Here's where your baking powder biscuit comes into its own as a factor in food combinations—strawberry shortcake. You can bake the dough in one piece, about an inch thick, in a cake tin, or fashion rather large individual shortcakes. When they're baked split them — never cut them — in half. Spread butter generously on the halves. Put one buttered half on a plate and cover it with rich, juicy strawberries, cut into pieces or crushed. Lay the other half on top, then douse that too, with the red, slightly sweetened fruit. Top the whole luscious morsel with cream—whipped cream is generally preferred, although lots of people like plain, rich cream just as well.

Week's Hints

Uncooked salad greens should always be cold, crisp and dry.

Coffee cream may be used instead of whipping cream in many frozen desserts.

Pastry dough should not be handled more than necessary.

AMBROSIA CAKE

½ cup butter or other shortening
1¼ cups granulated sugar
5 egg yolks
2½ cups cake flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup orange juice
1 teaspoon lemon extract

Cream butter thoroughly. Add sugar, a little at a time, and cream until fluffy. Add egg yolks, one at a time, beating after each addition. Sift and measure the flour. Then sift dry ingredients together. Mix milk, orange juice and lemon extract and add this mixture and the dry ingredients alternately to the butter mixture. Mix well after each addition. Divide batter into three parts and pour into three well-greased, heat resistant glass cake dishes, nine inches in diameter and two inches deep. Bake in a moderat oven (350°F.) for 35 minutes until well done. Spread Ambrosia Frosting between layers and over cake while slightly warm.

AMBROSIA FROSTING

3 egg whites
6½ tablespoons orange juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2¼ cups granulated sugar
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
1 cup moistened sweet coconut (canned)

Combine egg whites, juices and sugar in the top of a heat-resistant glass double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water. Beat constantly with a rotary egg beater, and cook about seven minutes or until frosting stands in peaks. Remove from the fire. Add grated orange rind and three-fourths of a cup of coconut. Beat until thick enough to spread. Spread frosting between layers of Ambrosia Cake, also on sides and top. Toast the remaining one-fourth cup of coconut in the broiler to a delicate brown and sprinkle over cake. (Freshly grated coconut is too damp to toast well.)

A NEW FORM OF BRAN

It's DOUBLE-MILLED WHOLE BRAN* — you'll like this gentle, helpful relief for constipation caused by too little bulk

ACCEPTED BY THE COUNCIL ON FOODS OF THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

DO you suffer from constipation caused by insufficient bulk? Would you like to know of a pleasant, efficient way to keep fit?

Then try NBC Bran. It's a new, improved bran developed in the National Biscuit Company laboratory from the bran of soft winter wheat. Its form is genuinely different!

Let us see the important advantages of the new NBC Double-Milled Whole Bran:

IT'S DOUBLE-MILLED

DOUBLE-MILLING makes the bran particles smaller and less likely to be irritating.

NBC BRAN aids in developing a large, soft mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

IT STAYS CRISP IN MILK—NBC Bran doesn't get soggy while you are eating it. It is cooked, then toasted for three minutes, which makes it delightfully crunchy.

A source of Vitamin B_1, Iron, and Phosphorus.

ACCEPTED BY THE COUNCIL ON FOODS OF THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

DO you suffer from constipation caused by insufficient bulk? Would you like to know of a pleasant, efficient way to keep fit?

Then try NBC Bran. It's a new, improved bran developed in the National Biscuit Company laboratory from the bran of soft winter wheat. Its form is genuinely different!

Let us see the important advantages of the new NBC Double-Milled Whole Bran:

IT'S DOUBLE-MILLED

DOUBLE-MILLING makes the bran particles smaller and less likely to be irritating.

NBC BRAN aids in developing a large, soft mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

IT STAYS CRISP IN MILK—NBC Bran doesn't get soggy while you are eating it. It is cooked, then toasted for three minutes, which makes it delightfully crunchy.

A source of Vitamin B1, Iron, and Phosphorus.

Here is a tempting, natural, ready-to-eat food to help relieve one of the most common forms of constipation. Eat it regularly. We know you'll like its appetizing golden color—its delicious flavor. If your constipation isn't corrected in this simple manner—consult a competent physician.

College Requirement: BRAINS Is Your Son Qualified To Go?

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

A good many thousand youths about to graduate from high school are thinking about going to college next year. Some already have chosen the college, even have been admitted on their high school records.

Those in the upper third or quarter of their classes, in an accredited high school, are readily accepted without entrance examination by most colleges. Those of lower rating, especially of the rank below the average of their class, are barred from certain colleges and universities. Their chances of success at any college are relatively poor.

Unfortunately, many bright boys and girls don't have money enough to go to college. Unless they have at least half enough, efforts to earn their way through college will be a very hazardous undertaking for them. Having "worked my way through college," I know something of what it means; and jobs are not so easy to find now as they were then. Hats off to to the 500 junior colleges of our nation, for they maks at least two years of college possible for many bright youths otherwise denied college opportunity.

Some Can Afford

$t is also too bad that so many youths whose parents could afford to send them to college don't have the brains" or moral stamina to warrant college attendance, even college entrance. And there are many needless tragedies in homes where parents have, from the time the child was born, planned to send this child to college, perhaps to the Alma Mater, only to discover, by and by, that the child cannot enter, that the college doors are closed to him. And then there are children with ability who fail at college for want of self-disscipline!

Let parents who are ambitious that their child shall eventually graduate from college keep in mind that they can only help develop the ability with which the child by nature is endowed. They can's put brains into the child's head, no matter how bright these parents are themselves.

Mental Habits

Let parents of young children realize that they can contribute most to the child's possible graduation from college by cultivating in him habits of mental work in an atmosphere of emotional security.

Suppose you had twins, a son and a daughter, both graduating near the head of their class in high school. Suppose they both wanted to go to college and, at best, you could scrape together only enough to send one. What would you do? Why not write your opinion to me in care of this paper?

Mr. Winters also sustained a broken rib and was otherwise bruised. The tractor had rubber tires, otherwise the accident would have in all probability been fatal.

107 Marriage Licenses

One hundred seven marriage licenses were issued at the office of the clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland in May, indicating that although the number is not as great as before the compulsory forty-eight-hour waiting period law went into effect, still quite a number of people who come here to be married.

As far as cash receipts are concerned, the decrease is only slight in comparison to what was expected when the law went into effect last December.

Last May there were 168 licenses issued, which, at $2 each, brought in $336. This May there were 107 licenses at $2 and in addition 119 applications at $1 each, making a total for the month of $324.

Williamsport Hit By Deluge of Rain

Baltimore, June 2 (AP)—Crop reviving rains worth thousands of dollars cheered Western Maryland farmers today as a steady downpour routed a drouth that had threatened farm produce and fruit.

Coupled with the general benefits was a deluge at Williamsport, in Washington county, which flooded streets and cellars, marooned motorists and damaged wheat and corn fields as the water surged through the surrounding farm lands.

The Williamsport storm, which poured down three inches of rain, came late yesterday on the fiftieth anniversary of the historic Johnstown flood which sent the placid Potomac swirling out of its banks.

The river raised but a few feet from yesterday's downpour, but the storm flooded Community park four feet deep and poured into the basement of the new Stoner recreational building.

Cellars in scores of Williamsport homes were flooded. Firemen, police and town employes were called out to rescue motorists stranded by the sudden storm.

Charge Man Married His Own Daughter

Washington, June 2 (AP)—A former Washington police sergeant was ordered held to the grand jury on a charge of incest today after U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage was informed that the man had married his own daughter, to whom two children subsequently were born.

Turnage said the case involved William D. Haislip, 45, who retired as a police officer after 20 years' service, and his daughter, Hazel, 21.

The charge was filed by an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which entered the case several weeks ago after a fire in the Haislip apartment in nearby Colmar Manor, Md., cost the life of a three-months-old baby.

Turnage said testimony was given that Haislip was married to another woman at the time he went through a marriage ceremony with his daughter at Baltimore on Sept. 24, 1937. The incest was alleged to have occurred in Washington.

Haislip's bond was set at $10,000.

Brother of Slayer Of Jesse James Dead

Elkins, W. Va., June 2. (AP)—A dying father called his two sons to his deathbed today and told them, the sons said, that he was Fay Ford, brother of Bob Ford who killed Jesse James.

The sons, Lenville and Darnell Howard, related their father, 82-year-old Pearl Howard, said that Bob Ford was killed at Lumberport, W. Va., 16 years ago where he engaged in lumber operations. The father declared Bob Ford lived under the name of James Ross and posed as his (Fay's) brother-in-law.

The Howards quoted their father as saying:

"I am dying a slow death. I have something to tell you boys. My real name is Fay Ford."

The sons said their father came to the Elkins district 50 years ago and had been employed in the lumber business. His wife died 21 years ago, they said.

ment rather than replace a system of insured loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, proposed in a bill by Senator Mead (D-NY).

Newsmen, appearing at a press conference called by Hopkins, were interested first of all in what happened last night at a White House conference attended by eight leading members of the commerce department's business advisory council.

Labor Act Discussed

The discussion, Hopkins said, ran, "the whole gamut" of the economic situation, and in particular went extensively into the National Labor Relations Act and pending proposals for amendments to that law.

Otherwise, the cabinet member disclosed, the conversation dwelt upon foreign trade, especially with reference to South America, and touched briefly on taxes.

"It was a frank and free discussion of the problems of the moment," Hopkins said. "The president was very well satisfied with the conference and indicated he would like to have future conferences with this group or with other groups of businessmen. I hope this can be arranged in a short time."

Two Escape Death in Crash of Oil Tanker Into Norfolk Bridge

Norfolk, Va., June 2 (AP) — The crash of an oil tanker into the Norfolk-Portsmouth bridge today sent two men and some 570 feet of the million dollar structure hurtling into the water and blocked the channel of the southern branch of the Elizabeth river.

Army engineers estimated it would take from two to three weeks to clear the channel to water traffic. Lieut. Col. J. H. Carruth said some of the wreckage was submerged, and that it might be possible for boats of very light draft to navigate the spot.

Two bridge tenders, C. O. Cunningham and I. Lee Zimmerman, escaped serious injury when they fell more than 10 feet from the top of the open vertical lift span into the water. Three others had narrow escapes.

Minnie and Dorthy Avery, of Oceana, leaped from their automobile and scurried from the east span of the bridge a few seconds before it plunged into the river, carrying their car with it. Earle P. Hudgins, of Norfolk, said he backed his car off the span by a margin so close it left him breathless.

The Howards quoted their father as saying:

"I am dying a slow death. I have something to tell you boys. My real name is Fay Ford."

The sons said their father came to the Elkins district 50 years ago and had been employed in the lumber business. His wife died 21 years ago, they said.

ment rather than replace a system of insured loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, proposed in a bill by Senator Mead (D-NY).

Newsmen, appearing at a press conference called by Hopkins, were interested first of all in what happened last night at a White House conference attended by eight leading members of the commerce department's business advisory council.

Labor Act Discussed

The discussion, Hopkins said, ran, "the whole gamut" of the economic situation, and in particular went extensively into the National Labor Relations Act and pending proposals for amendments to that law.

Otherwise, the cabinet member disclosed, the conversation dwelt upon foreign trade, especially with reference to South America, and touched briefly on taxes.

"It was a frank and free discussion of the problems of the moment," Hopkins said. "The president was very well satisfied with the conference and indicated he would like to have future conferences with this group or with other groups of businessmen. I hope this can be arranged in a short time."

Two Escape Death in Crash of Oil Tanker Into Norfolk Bridge

Norfolk, Va., June 2 (AP) — The crash of an oil tanker into the Norfolk-Portsmouth bridge today sent two men and some 570 feet of the million dollar structure hurtling into the water and blocked the channel of the southern branch of the Elizabeth river.

Army engineers estimated it would take from two to three weeks to clear the channel to water traffic. Lieut. Col. J. H. Carruth said some of the wreckage was submerged, and that it might be possible for boats of very light draft to navigate the spot.

Two bridge tenders, C. O. Cunningham and I. Lee Zimmerman, escaped serious injury when they fell more than 10 feet from the top of the open vertical lift span into the water. Three others had narrow escapes.

Minnie and Dorthy Avery, of Oceana, leaped from their automobile and scurried from the east span of the bridge a few seconds before it plunged into the river, carrying their car with it. Earle P. Hudgins, of Norfolk, said he backed his car off the span by a margin so close it left him breathless.

Murphy Announces Campaign Against Spies in the West

Attorney General Starts Move to Protect American Secrets

Washington, June 2 (AP)—An intensive campaign against foreign spies on the Pacific coast, especially in the areas around vital army, navy and aviation establishments, was announced here by Attorney General Murphy.

Returning with J. Edgar Hoover from a flying trip to the coast, he told his press conference that counter-espionage lines "out there" have been tightened "for very specific reasons."

"We took adequate measures because of the geography there and military, naval and aviation centers," he said. "We are going to see that there isn't any laxity."

The justice department, he said, intends to see that the situation is in "complete control."

He asserted that reports of sabotage at aviation plants are being investigated.

An espionage investigation, he added, is under way in San Francisco.

There is much military and naval activity along the Pacific coast. Since 1932, the U. S. fleet has been concentrated in the Pacific, with major operating bases at San Diego and San Pedro. About half of all planes made for the army and navy are manufactured on the coast.

Recently, the war department has ordered airplane manufacturers to keep a closer check on aliens employed. Another phase of the government effort to protect its war preparedness operations was an order making San Clemente Island, off San Diego, a military area. The order forbade fishing in neighboring waters.

Episcopal Bishop Consecrated Today

Easton, Md., June 2 (AP)—The Rev. William McClelland was consecrated as bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Easton today, a quarter of a century after he was ordained a deacon and priest in the church.

Presiding bishop Henry St. George Tucker will conduct the services in Christ church here, with the Rev. Frank W. Sterrett, bishop of Bethlehem, and the Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, bishop of Maryland, as co-consecrators.

Mr. McClelland was ordained a priest in the church in 1914, three years following his graduation from Harvard. A year later he obtained an M. A. degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

Tomorrow's consecration will climax a long record of church service by the Philadelphia-born minister, now 56 years old.

Mr. McClelland came here as rector of Dorchester parish, St. Paul's parish and St. Stephen's parish, of the eastern shore, in 1924 after serving at St. Matthews, Philadelphia, and the memorial church of St. Luke.

Lady Commissioner Takes Firm Stand

Baltimore, June 2 (AP)—Harford county's one-time lady senator, who grew flowers in state-house cuspidors, has a nice office as Maryland's new administrator of loan laws—and whoever tries to move her out will have a fight on his hands.

That was the way Miss Mary Risteau sized up her first battle with official "red tape".

Under a law passed by the 1939 legislature, effective today, the administrator of loans replaces the state loans commissioner, whose office is transferred to the state banking department. But Miss Risteau said today, she's not moving.

In fact, she had her name and title lettered on the office doors and setteled down for a long stay, economy move or no economy move.

The statute abolishing the commissionership originally was drawn to reduce overhead costs and increase efficiency and was part of the government reorganization program backed by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor.

Maryland Boy Drowns Fishing for Tadpoles

Rising Sun, Md., June 2 (AP) — James Lawrence Hoover, 6, drowned last night while fishing for tadpoles, nine months after his father was killed in a gravel pit while employed by WPA.

The child fell into a quarry hole about 100 feet from his home at Rock Spring near here. Screaming children brought Stewart Rakes to the pit. He quickly fashioned a grappling iron and pulled the child to shore 15 minutes after he fell in.

State police and the rescue squad from Port Deposit attempted resuscitation for three hours. There will be no coroner inquest.

Galento-Louis Bout May Go to Philadelphia

Poor Turnout At Nova-Baer Scrap May Cause Shift

Galento Will Probably Raise Howl At Hearing Due Today

Experts Say Nova Too Easy Target for Louis--Baer Is "Sight"

BY GAYLE TALBOT

New York, June 2 (AP)—While victorious Lou Nova and his badly damaged victim, Maxie Baer, licked their wounds from last night's savage engagement at Yankee Stadium, fans went forward today for another bristling encounter at high noon tomorrow, when Champion Joe Louis and rotund Tony Galento agreed to sign the papers for their title bout June 28.

There's a strong possibility the session will end in a wild uproar, with Galento defying the New York State Boxing Commission and demanding the scrap be transferred to Philadelphia.

Louis' Views Change

After the disappointing crowd of 23,738 paying customers that watched Nova cut Baer up and force his retirement in the 11th round last night, it will be quite all right with promoter Mike Jacobs if the commission gets stuffy and forces him to take the big fight out of town.

"The tickets are printed and ready, but not one will go out until tomorrow's meeting is over," said Mike.

The Galento camp has wanted to hold the fight in Philadelphia all along. Tony is a great favorite there. Louis has held out for New York, but the fact that Nova and Baer each received only $22,517 for last night's engagement might have impressed the champion.

There was no further word from Max Carlen, Nova's manager, on the subject of a September scrap against the winner of the June 28 affair. He promised to make a statement tomorrow. The expectation was that he would ask for a continuance until next summer after noting the ease with which Baer lost rights on his handsome lad's chin.

Nova Easy Target

A round of the boxing marts today didn't unearth a single old-time fighter or manager who thought Nova should be tossed into the ring with Louis this year. Some of them thought he did a fine, workmanlike job on Baer but all shuddered to think what Louis would do to him as a target.

Baer looked a sight today. Three stitches were put in his jagged upper lip and his eyes looked like ill-done mushrooms. He said as much as he could see himself in the mirror without wincing he was going golfing for a week. At 30, with plenty of money in the bank, the former champion probably is through with fighting, though you can never tell.

New York Giants Gallop Cards 8-2

New York, June 2 (AP)—The New York Giants, who hadn't scored a run in their last 15 innings, grouped them in the first frame today to walk the St. Louis Cardinals 8 to 2.

The uprising was staged against Curt Davis on two errors, a double, a sacrifice bunt, and three singles, two of them by Joe Demaree with the bases loaded.

Hank Danning homered to lead the Giants to their other three runs in the eighth.

Slaughter in Prospect For English Polo Team

(Released by The North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

New York, June 2—The international polo series between America and England starts Sunday, with the English team conceded to have at least as good a chance of winning as Sir Thomas Lipton used to have of capturing the America's cup, in those celebrated pursuit races off Newport.

Sir Thomas coveted the America's cup with all his heart and soul, though nobody could figure out exactly what he planned to put in it, except tea, and tea, even off Newport, was considered to be bad for the lining of the stomach, interfering as it does with the free and natural absorption of the dry Martini.

After chasing American boats hell-for-leather up and down the sea lanes, and often crossing the line on the same day, which amounts to a photo finish in yachting, the British challenger was replaced by T. O. M. Sopwith, who chased our navy just as hard as Sir Thomas did, and once or twice came close enough to be fouled.

Fouls As Good-Will Aids

The history of English-American sports relations is studded with fouls, all delivered with a friendly spirit which has linked the two nations more and more tightly together. Tom Cribb fouled Tom Molineaux in the first great international boxing match. A century later almost every American fighter who could get a license was fouling Phainting Phil Scott, Pall Mall's non-perpendicular pride. At least, that was Philip's story, and no one ever clutched his thigh more artistically in the interests of international good will.

Anyway, getting back to the international polo series, the private opinion around Meadowbrook, where you are practically naked without a mallet in your hand, is that the thing will be murder.

"The English team is extremely well-mounted," says Mr. Stephen Jerome Hannagan, the public relations counsel, whose job it is to make the series look close, and the experts agree that, when it is over, the English will be not only mounted, but stuffed.

The actual betting, what there is of it, favors the Americans at about 4 to 1. Mr. Hannagan and the polite polo world generally were more than a little embarrassed last week when the first-string English team, riding out for a workout against a pick-up squad of local boys, got a shave and a haircut and a thorough licking.

"There has been some mistake, no doubt," said Mr. Hannagan, lighting his cigarette nonchalantly, "and the Indianapolis automobile race this year will be bigger and better than ever."

Changes In Both Line-Ups

Since that time, the line-ups of both the English and American teams hae been changed, the English a bit for the better, the American a trifle for the worse.

England dropped Aidan Roark, who had not had the necessary preparation for these matches, and supplanted him with a sub named John Lakin, who can go off tackle for occasional short gains. The Americans lost Cecil Smith the other day when this tough ten-goal Texan fell off his horse and suffered a slight concussion.

Smith is a great player, and the Americans will miss him, but the sad fact remains that they can now slip in another ten-goaler, Stewart Iglehart, who is just about as good. It still looks to the critics as though a slaughter is in prospect.

Two years ago, a team from the Argentine staged the greatest massacre of American cavalry since Sitting Bull cleaned up at Little Big Horn. Astride great horses, the Argentines raced up and down the field for twenty-three goals. But the team they beat was merely the Twilight League champion, and not an international American side. Today, the Americans have got those Argentine horses—few Argentines, from Luis Angel Firpo down the line, have gone home broke, the market up here being what it is—and the American players are the pick of the lot. A Hitchcock, and Iglehart, and a Phipps make a lot of difference.

What I know about polo could be skewered lightly, with room for punctuation, on the eyeball of a boll weevil. The form book says the Americans will win, and the safest thing to do when you are out of your depth is stick with the form book. So make it the Americans, by a knockout in less than seven rounds.

Johnstown Big Favorite To Win Belmont Stakes

Odds on Galloping Winner of Kentucky Derby 1 to 10

New York, June 2 (AP)—Johnstown, beaten out of a chance to join the select winners of America's triple crown by the muddy Preakness, goes postward tomorrow as the outstanding choice to capture the 71st $50,000 Belmont Stakes, last of the turf's rich spring fixtures for three-year-olds.

The big bay from William Woodward's Belair Stud, galloping winner of the Kentucky Derby and an easier winner of last Saturday's Withers mile, is the 1 to 10 choice to win the mile and a half journey at Belmont Park. He will run coupled in the betting with Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Gilded Knight, second to Challedon in the Preakness, and Woodward's giant Challenge, but it is the presence of "Big John" himself that makes the odds prohibitive.

Given a fast track, Johnstown is expected to go to the front at the start and stay there all the way. That's the way Jimmy Stout has been riding him this season and it got results in everything except the Preakness where he faltered in the drive and finished far back. Challedon is not eligible for the Belmont.

Gilded Knight failed to show anything in the Withers, but trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons is inclined to throw that one out as just a bad race. Unless it is muddy, Challenge probably will be scratched.

Of the others only John Hay Whitney's Heather Broom has tangled with the Belair ace. Even the Earl Sande trained colt could do no better than third in the Kentucky Derby. He figures to be the second choice tomorrow at around 15 to 1.

The remainder all are rank outsiders and that goes for J. E. Widener's unbeaten Knickerbocker, which surprised in the Metropolitan mile after winning his only two starts last year. However, he packed only 100 pounds in the Metropolitan. Tomorrow he'll have 126 in the saddle, the same as the others.

Completing the field are, A. C. Bostwick's Belay, William Ziegler, Jr.'s Time Sheet, stablemate of the disappointing El Chico, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash.

PUNK PLUG PICKER Alias Paddock Pete

What price, doughnuts? the kind with holes, I mean. With that seven-and-a-half to one hook-up yesterday I can buy a lot of eithe' kind, World's Fair prices and all. If the luck don't run out I'll be bringing back the much touted perisphere and trylon on my flat car pullman. It rained up here yesterday; I wonder if the 'heat' is still on in the Queen City!

Storing up against a lean day, I'm picking a pair of puddle jumping pabies at Delaware today. Rissa and Spartan Lady are good swimmers!

Post,

PPPP

Saddle Strap Sam's Postscript to P.P.

P. P., old plug picker, you sure are in your stride when the blinds are down, which proves that picking them blind is as good a system as I used in selecting "SEASONAL."

I see by the papers that they've shipped "Camp Verde" down to Delaware and it's given as the "best bet" by several of the "good books" so go get a goboon full in the fourth there at Delaware today.

"Blue Grotto" is scheduled to start in the first at Detroit and it looks like a picnic . . . and it it ain't a picnic then its a panhandle.

Remember we pictured you hiding in a "blue grotto" near "panther creek" some time back . . . which reminds me that up above or hereabouts we pictured yours truly doing a little free-wheeling with a wheelbarrow . . . or is that barrow spelled with two o's . . . borrow? . . . We'll have to borrow, beg or steal a parcel of petunias if business keeps on as it is, or rather as business ain't since there is none . . .

Yours till the cows go home . . . and no bull!

Galento-Louis Bout May Go to Philadelphia

Poor Turnout At Nova-Baer Scrap May Cause Shift

Galento Will Probably Raise Howl At Hearing Due Today

BY GAYLE TALBOT

New York, June 2 (AP)—While victorious Lou Nova and his badly damaged victim, Maxie Baer, licked their wounds from last night's savage engagement at Yankee Stadium, plans went forward today for another bristling encounter at high noon tomorrow, when Champion Joe Louis and rotund Tony Galento met to sign the papers for their title bout June 28.

There's a strong possibility the session will end in a wild uproar, with Galento defying the New York State Boxing Commission and demanding the scrap be transferred to Philadelphia.

Louis' Views Change

After the disappointing crowd of 32,738 paying customers that watched Nova cut Baer up and force his retirement in the 11th round last night, it will be quite all right with promoter Mike Jacobs if the commission gets stuffy and forces him to take the big fight out of town.

"The tickets are printed and ready, but not one will go out until tomorrow's meeting is over," said Mike.

The Galento camp has wanted to hold the fight in Philadelphia all along. Tony is a great favorite there. Louis has held out for New York, but the fact that Nova and Baer each received only $22,517 for last night's engagement might have impressed the champion.

There was no further word from Max Carlen, Nova's manager, on the subject of a September scrap against the winner of the June 28 affair. He promised to make a statement tomorrow. The expectation was that he would ask for a continuance until next summer after noting the ease with which Baer lost rights on his handsome lad's map.

Nova Easy Target

A round of the boxing marts today didn't unearth a single old-time fighter or manager who thought Nova should be tossed into the ring with Louis this year. Some of them thought he did a fine, workmanlike job on Baer but all shuddered to think what Louis would do to him as a target.

Baer looked a sight today. Three stitches were put in his jagged lower lip and his eyes looked like well-done mushrooms. He said as much as he could see himself in the mirror without wincing he was going golfing for a week. At 30, with plenty of money in the bank, the former champion probably is through with fighting, though you can never tell.

New York Giants Gallop Cards 8-2

New York, June 2 (AP)—The New York Giants, who hadn't scored a run in their last 15 innings, grouped them in the first frame today to walk the St. Louis Cardinals 8 to 2.

The uprising was staged against Curt Davis on two errors, a double, a sacrifice bunt, and three singles, two of them by Joe Demaree with the bases loaded.

Hank Danning homered to lead the Giants to their other three runs in the eighth.

Slaughter in Prospect For English Polo Team

(Released by The North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

New York, June 2—The international polo series between America and England starts Sunday, with the English team conceded to have at least as good a chance of winning as Sir Thomas Lipton used to have of capturing the America's cup, in those celebrated pursuit races off Newport.

Sir Thomas coveted the America's cup with all his heart and soul, though nobody could figure out exactly what he planned to put in it, except tea, and tea, even off Newport, was considered to be bad for the lining of the stomach, interfering as it does with the free and natural absorption of the dry Martini.

After chasing American boats hell-for-leather up and down the sea lanes, and often crossing the line on the same day, which amounts to a photo finish in yachting, the British challenger was replaced by T. O. M. Sopwith, who chased our navy just as hard as Sir Thomas did, and once or twice came close enough to be fouled.

Fouls As Good-Will Aids

The history of English-American sports relations is studded with fouls, all delivered with a friendly spirit which has linked the two nations more and more tightly together. Tom Cribb fouled Tom Molineaux in the first great international boxing match. A century later almost every American fighter who could get a license was fouling Phainting Phil Scott, Pall Mall's non-perpendicular pride. At least, that was Philip's story, and no one ever clutched his thigh more artistically in the interests of international good will.

Anyway, getting back to the international polo series, the private opinion around Meadowbrook, where you are practically naked without a mallet in your hand, is that the thing will be murder.

"The English team is extremely well-mounted," says Mr. Stephen Jerome Hannagan, the public relations counsel, whose job it is to make the series look close, and the experts agree that, when it is over, the English will be not only mounted, but stuffed.

The actual betting, what there is of it, favors the Americans at about 4 to 1. Mr. Hannagan and the polite polo world generally were more than a little embarrassed last week when the first-string English team, riding out for a workout against a pick-up squad of local boys, got a shave and a haircut and a thorough licking.

"There has been some mistake, no doubt," said Mr. Hannagan, lighting his cigarette nonchalantly, "and the Indianapolis automobile race this year will be bigger and better than ever."

Changes In Both Line-Ups

Since that time, the line-ups of both the English and American teams hae been changed, the English a bit for the better, the American a trifle for the worse.

England dropped Aidan Roark, who had not had the necessary preparation for these matches, and supplanted him with a sub named John Lakin, who can go off tackle for occasional short gains. The Americans lost Cecil Smith the other day when this tough ten-goal Texan fell off his horse and suffered a slight concussion.

Smith is a great player, and the Americans will miss him, but the sad fact remains that they can now slip in another ten-goaler, Stewart Iglehart, who is just about as good. It still looks to the critics as though a slaughter is in prospect.

Two years ago, a team from the Argentine staged the greatest massacre of American cavalry since Sitting Bull cleaned up at Little Big Horn, Astride great horses, the Argentines raced up and down the field for twenty-three goals. But the team they beat was merely the Twilight League champion, and not an international American side. Today, the Americans have got those Argentine horses—few Argentines, from Luis Angel Firpo down the line, have gone home broke, the market up here being what it is—and the American players are the pick of the lot. A Hitchcock, and Iglehart, and a Phipps make a lot of difference.

What I know about polo could be engraved lightly, with room for punctuation, on the eyeball of a boll weevil. The form book says the Americans will win, and the safest thing to do when you are out of your depth is stick with the form book. So make it the Americans, by a knockout in less than seven rounds.

Johnstown Big Favorite To Win Belmont Stakes

Odds on Galloping Winner of Kentucky Derby 1 to 10

New York, June 2 (AP)—Johnstown, beaten out of a chance to join the select winners of America's triple crown by the muddy Preakness, goes postward tomorrow as the outstanding choice to capture the 71st $50,000 Belmont Stakes, last of the turf's rich spring fixtures for three-year-olds.

The big bay from William Woodward's Belair Stud, galloping winner of the Kentucky Derby and an easier winner of last Saturday's Withers mile, is the 1 to 10 choice to win the mile and a half journey at Belmont Park. He will run coupled in the betting with Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Gilded Knight, second to Challedon in the Preakness, and Woodward's giant Challenge, but it is the presence of "Big John" himself that makes the odds prohibitive.

Given a fast track, Johnstown is expected to go to the front at the start and stay there all the way. That's the way Jimmy Stout has been riding him this season and it got results in everything except the Preakness where he faltered in the drive and finished far back. Challedon is not eligible for the Belmont.

Gilded Knight failed to show anything in the Withers, but trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons is inclined to throw that one out as just a bad race. Unless it is muddy, Challenge probably will be scratched.

Of the others only John Hay Whitney's Heather Broom has tangled with the Belair ace. Even the Earl Sande trained colt could do no better than third in the Kentucky Derby. He figures to be the second choice tomorrow at around 15 to 1.

The remainder all are rank outsiders and that goes for J. E. Widener's unbeaten Knickerbocker, which surprised in the Metropolitan mile after winning his only two starts last year. However, he packed only 100 pounds in the Metropolitan. Tomorrow he'll have 126 in the saddle, the same as the others.

Completing the field are, A. C. Bostwick's Belay, William Ziegler, Jr.'s Time Sheet, stablemate of the disappointing El Chico, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash.

PUNK PLUG PICKER Alias Paddock Pete

What price, doughnuts? the kind with holes, I mean. With that seven-and-a-half to one hook-up yesterday I can buy a lot of eithe. kind, World's Fair prices and all. If the luck don't run out I'll be bringing back the much touted perisphere and trylon on my flat car pullman. It rained up here yesterday; I wonder if the 'heat' is still on in the Queen City!

Storing up against a lean day, I'm picking a pair of puddle jumping pabies at Delaware today. Rissa and Spartan Lady are good swimmers!

Post,

PPPP

Saddle Strap Sam's Postscript to P.P.

P. P., old plug picker, you sure are in your stride when the blinds are down, which proves that picking them blind is as good a system as I used in selecting "SEASONAL."

I see by the papers that they've shipped "Camp Verde" down to Delaware and it's given as the "best bet" by several of the "good books" so go get a gobboon full in the fourth there at Delaware today.

"Blue Grotto" is scheduled to start in the first at Detroit and it looks like a picnic . . . and it it ain't a picnic then its a panhandle.

Remember we pictured you hiding in a "blue grotto" near "panther creek" some time back . . . which reminds me that up above or hereabouts we pictured yours truly doing a little free-wheeling with a wheelbarrow . . . or is that barrow spelled with two o's . . . borrow? . . . We'll have to borrow, beg or steal a parcel of petunias if business keeps on as it is, or rather as business ain't since there is none . . .

Yours till the cows go home . . . and no bull!

Saddle Strap Sam.

Reds Score Four Runs in 11th To Beat Boston

Moore Has Edge Over Shoffner in Pitcher's Battle

Second Straight Extra Inning Win over Bees; Reds Gain on Cards

Boston, June 2 (AP)—Ernie Lombardi's ninth homer of the season, driven into the left field stands with two mates aboard, today climaxed the Cincinnati Reds' second straight overtime victory over the Boston Bees, by a 4-0 margin in eleven innings. The Reds exploded a five-run barrage in the 13th to win yesterday's game.

During most of the shutout, which enabled the Reds to gain a game on the second-place St. Louis Cardinals, Milburn Shoffner, the Boston southpaw, waged a keen duel with Whitey Moore.

Until the tenth, Shoffner limited the hard-hitting league leaders to five scattered hits, and their first scoring chance did not come until Bill Werber opened the 11th with a single. After he was forced by Linus Frey, Shoffner issued his third base on balls to Ival Goodman.

The pace then told on Shoffner and after Frank McCormick singled to bring in Frey with the first run, Lombardi belted the first ball pitched into the stands for the other three tallies.

The Bees collected eight hits off Moore, but that righthander kept them well scattered while fanning six and giving but one pass. Buddy Hassett connected for three singles, none of which caused any damage.

MEN ON HORSEBACK

New York—From punch to polo, from the Yankee Stadium to the green-carpeted field at Meadow Brook. Max Baer and Lou Nova, having done their stuff, step back as the English and Americans warm up for the next major event in a crowded June.

It has been twenty-five years since an English team last won at Meadow Brook. In 1914, Capt. Tomkinson, Capt. Cheape, Major Barrett and Capt. Lockett—probably the best team that ever came over the sea—beat Rene La Montagne, the Waterburys and Dev Milburn. That was in June. In July the guns began to roar from Belgium to the Marne and Leslie Cheape was killed.

Seven years rolled by before there was another clash for the Westchester Cup. In 1921 Louis Stoddard, Watson Webb and Dev Milburn went to England, picked up an American kid named Tommy Hitchcock who was a student at Oxford—and brought back the cup. Since then there have been four series—at Meadow Brook in 1924, 1927 and 1930 and at Hurlingham in 1936 when, as a sporting gesture, the Americans went across to give the Britons a whirl on their home heath.

America Favored Again

This time the odds ride again with the Americans. The team composed of Hitchcock—the same Tommy who joined up from Oxford in 1921—Cecil Smith, Mike Phipps and either Stewart Iglehart or Winston Guest is favored to take the invaders in the series that begins on Sunday and will be run through the next two Sundays—it already has been agreed that although the series will be decided, two games out of three, all three will be played.

However, the dope is that, even if the Americans do win in straight games, they will be as close as those played at Hurlingham three years ago when the English team went down, 10 to 9 and 8 to 6 before a team that, while lacking Hitchcock, still was presumed to be considerably stronger than any the could be mustered over there. This year the English have made greater preparations for the matches than ever they did before.

Their pony strings, put together with the best horse flesh that could be combed from England, Ireland, India and the Argentine, have been in this country for months. Three of their first string players—Aidan Roark, Gerald Balding and Eric Tyrrell-Martin—have spent years in America and are thoroughly familiar not only with our style of play but with the men against whom they will be playing, having played against them or with them many times before. Their fourth man, well known these last two years in California but a stranger to Meadow Brook, is Bob Skene, who was born in India but calls Australia his home.

The Best Since 1914

Skene, tall, dark and broad-shouldered but weighing, in spite of his six feet, only 154 pounds, so that he is the lightest of the Britons, was born in Assarn, India, in 1914, the year that England triumphed for the last ime. According to Earl Hopping, a first-rate polo player in his own right, Skene is the best No. 1 an English team has had since 1914, when Capt. Tomkinson led the raid on Meadow Brook. He learned the game from his father, hooked up with the famous Ashton brothers later and has played all over Australia, in India and in England and has made a couple of trips to California.

He is a hard rider, fearless and a brilliant shot. From the standpoint of the crowd, he will be the most compelling figure in the blue and brown of England when the teams ride out to play—and I imagine the American players will be watching him pretty carefully, too.

Roark, now a motion picture executive in Hollywood, has had a wide experience in American polo. He has been on three West Coast championship teams, played for the West against the East in 1933 and 1934 and, curiously enough, went to England last year as a member of the Texas Rangers who won four open turnaments during the London season. This will be his first appearance in a Westchester Cup series. He was a member of the squad in 1930 but illness prevented him from playing.

Either Guest or Iglehart

Until a week or so ago it seemed the American team would be the "dream" or 'perfect" (40-goal combination) of Hitchcock, Smith, Phipps and Iglehart. And then Winston Guest, once a 10-goal player, too, but now rated at 8 goals, came riding back to threaten Iglehart's place on the team.

The American Defense Committee—Bobby Strawbridge, Milburn, Hitchcock, Jock and Sonny Whitney and Major Louis Beard—have not made their final selections as yet. But whether they give the ultimate nod to Guest or Iglehart, it will be a formidable array that Tommy Hitchcock will lead out on International Field these next three Sundays. There isn't anything any of them can't do with a mallet, a ball and a horse.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, June 2 (AP)—Joe Jacobs spoke emphatically, and as clearly as teeth clenched over the draught end of a long cigar would permit.

"Galento," he declared, "would have licked both of them in there tonight."

Little Joe, whose remark naturally was unprejudiced inasmuch as he manages Tony Galento, sat with bright brown eyes fixed vacantly on the ring where Lou Nova had been declared winner over Max Baer by a technical knockout a few short minutes before.

Workmen started dismantling the arena, the bang of hammers providing an overtone to the clackety-clack of typewriters. The lights, except for the brilliant glare over the ring, went out, leaving Yankee Staudium a vast, black void. Still he sat there. He might have been trying to visualize what will happen on the same spot when his Tony Galento meets Joe Louis June 28.

He had taken the halter off Tony for the evening, and the big orange from Orange, N. J., had enjoyed a field day at the ringside, his squat, blimp-like body and round head bobbing around as he greeted friend and foe. He waddled into the ring for an introduction, standing there stroking his pumkin paunch like a man fresh up from a Thanksgiving dinner. He greeted Louis. "I wished him luck," he explained later.

Joe Jacobs again broke his reverie.

"Nova looked bad and Baer looked terrible," he continued. "I said before the fight that Baer must win inside of five rounds if he won at all. As soon as he came out of his corner I knew he was finished. Instead of coming out swinging with a wild flurry of punches like he used to do, he took one or two swings and let up.

"I had tried to get Baer to meet Galento in Philadelphia," Joe explained. "I told him the bout would draw $500,000 there. But no, he wanted Nova. Said Nova was a soft touch. And look what happens. He takes a beating, and the fight doesn't draw a hundred grand."

Regardless of Jacobs' unprejudiced opinion, it is this corner's belief that Lou Nova wasn't so bad, but that he is still far from ready for a shot at Louis. When he fought his fight, eternally moving, stabbing and chopping, he was the master. When he elected to slug he flirted with the canvas.

He had courage and determination and stamina. Baer had courage and determination but his legs were leaden after a few rounds.

Never let it be said that he quit. He took an unmerciful beating, sometimes without rebuttal, and was on his feet at the end.

His eyes told the story of his gradual resignation. He stalked from the corner at the start of the first round with a satanic expression, eyes narrowed to mere slits. A bogeyman of the nursery. As the rounds wore on the expression lost its menace ,became haunted. At the end he was a tired old man, his eyes, by that time slits from the pumping of Nova's fists, without trace of venom.

But he didn't quit.

Yanks Pound Four Indian Pitchers For 17 to 5 Win

"Bronx Bombers" Slam out 18 Hits; Donald Wins Fifth Game

Cleveland, June 2 (AP)—The world champion New York Yankees poured on their vaunted power today to overwhelm the Cleveland Indians 17 to 5 for the second straight win of their series.

Altogether the Bronx bombers exploded 18 hits, including two home runs, into the laps of four Cleveland pitchers, who were upset so badly they contributed 14 bases on balls.

Meanwhile rookie Atley Donald spaced 11 hits to gain his fifth victory without defeat. After scoring once in the first on a hit and an error, the Indians went runless until the seventh when Jeff Heath's homer with one on sparked a three-run rally. They got their other tally on two hits and an error in the eighth.

PAPA BAER SNARLS AT LI'L LOU

Max Baer, onetime heavyweight champion of the world, took a fearful shellacking at the hands of young Lou Nova at the Yankee Stadium in New York City. The fifteen round fight was stopped less than a minute and a half after the eleventh round began. Baer was bleeding badly from a cut lip. Youth had its day, for Baer's Sunday punch failed to floor the younger Nova in the third round. Nova's fine staying power kept him on his feet to win the battle.

Ralph Guldahl Takes Lead in Goodall Tourney

National Open Golf Champion Has a Score of Plus 23

BY BILL BONI

New York, June 2 (AP) — Ralph Guldahl, the national open golf champion, changed his tactics today. The man who has won his two major titles by coming from behind down the stretch turned into a front-runner as he shaved three strokes from the Fresh Meadow Country Club's par for 36 holes and moved into first place in the $5,000 Goodall round-robin tournament.

After 54 holes, and with 72 still to go, the Madison (N.J.) pro has a score of plus 23, representing that many winning holes in three matches with six rivals. Starting today's play in fifth place, Guldahl fired a morning-round 68, two under standard figures, to be 6 up on Olin Dutra, himself a former open champion, and 4 up on Ben Hogan.

In the afternoon, Ralph followed up with a 69 that left him 3 up on Jimmy Thomson and 5 up on Horton Smith. For his morning score he pocketed the special $50 prize for the day's low round, and with his 36-hole effort he took the lead in the race for $1,000 top money that will go to the winner on Sunday afternoon.

Tomorrow he will go up against Harry Cooper and Tony Penna. Cooper is the only other man in the 15-star field who has yet to lose a match. The dapper little veteran from Eastern Point, Conn., despite the fact he was scrambling all day, came up with a morning 69 that picked up 5 points against Dick Metz, runner-up in the open last year, and blond Jimmy Hines of Great Neck, N. Y.

In the afternoon Cooper came out on top in the closest match of the entire day. With a par 70 that included four birdies and as many bogeys in the first ten holes, and finieshed up with eight straight pars, Harry beat Sam Snead by 1 up and Paul Runyan by two, to boost himself into second place with a plus 15 score.

Snead, who won last year's inaugural after a two-hole play off with Gene Sarazen, slid down into third place with a plus 13 rating. The West Virginia mountaineer added two points to his first-round total of 11 by winning four holes from Denny Shute while losing two and Runyan barely managed to finish all even.

South Branch Loop Will Open Campaign

Moorefield, W. Va., June 2—With their lineups liberally sprinkled with newcomers, the four clubs of the newly-organized South Branch Valley Baseball League will launch the loop campaign this weekend.

Moorefield's Midgets, 1936 champions of the Bi-State League and expected to be among the leading title contenders, will play the Mathias Majors on the latter's field Saturday afternoon and on Sunday will tangle with the Petersburg Merchants here. Petersburg will meet CCC Camp Hardy tomorrow at Petersburg. In another Sunday clash, Mathias will play Camp Hardy on the Triple-C diamond.

Each team will play the other six times during the season. Players must be residents of one of the towns in the circuit. Both Petersburg and Moorefield have a number of former high school tossers on their rosters.

WHEN THE FIGHT WAS STOPPED

Here is Max Baer, former heavyweight champion of the world, snapped immediately after the referee stopped the scheduled fifteen round fight in the eleventh round. Baer's mouth was badly cut and he was bleeding profusely. He was barely able to defend himself against a badly-tired Nova. The youngster's staying power pulled him through a critical third round, when Baer landed his Sunday right and had Nova groggy. After that it was Nova's fight to the end.

Declares Vale Summit School Won One-Room Schools Track Meet

Resident Points to Alleged Discrepancy on Ruling by Officials

The News Sports Editor:

"Although Little Orleans school was proclaimed track champions of the one room schools at Cumberland fair grounds on Wednesday, May 24th it is deserving that the public know that Vale Summit is rightfully the winner.

"According to officials of the meet, Little Orleans school had 44 points and Vale Summit was second with 43 tallies.

"The following statements are not made to criticise in any way the Little Orleans school, for there is no doubt that school earned every point it was credited to, but on the other hand Vale Summit was as I see it deprived on its points.

"Catherine Leake a student in the seventh grade at Vale Summit school was entered in the dodge ball throw for distance (12 years and over) when she completed her throw the ball had hit on the 81 ft. line and as no other school had equaled that distance, the referee stated that she need not take her remaining two throws as three chances were allowed each one.

"The referee wrote her name on the entry sheet and told her to go to the table under the grandstand and she would be given her badge and credited with 1st place points. When she arrived she was told the event had been closed and another school had been credited with the points but officials stated she would receive her badge and 1st place points, after she had been presented with the badge and officials saw she represented Vale Summit school on the entry card, they refused the points. Their argument was that she was too late for the throw that the event had been closed.

"If she was too late for the throw, why was she permitted to throw? why was she presented the badge? and on the other hand anyone who was participating in dodge ball games, how could they be at both

Reds Score Four Runs in 11th To Beat Boston

Moore Has Edge Over Shoffner in Pitcher's Battle

Second Straight Extra Inning Win over Bees; Reds Gain on Cards

Boston, June 2 (AP)—Ernie Lombardi's ninth homer of the season, driven into the left field stands with two mates aboard, today climaxed the Cincinnati Reds' second straight overtime victory over the Boston Bees, by a 4-0 margin in eleven innings. The Reds exploded a five-run barrage in the 13th to win yesterday's game.

During most of the shutout, which enabled the Reds to gain a game on the second-place St. Louis Cardinals, Milburn Shoffner, the Boston southpaw, waged a keen duel with Whitey Moore.

Until the tenth, Shoffner limited the hard-hitting league leaders to five scattered hits, and their first scoring chance did not come until Bill Werber opened the 11th with a single. After he was forced by Linus Frey, Shoffner issued his third base on balls to Ival Goodman.

The pace then told on Shoffner and after Frank McCormick singled to bring in Frey with the first run, Lombardi belted the first ball pitched into the stands for the other three tallies.

The Bees collected eight hits off Moore, but that righthander kept them well scattered while fanning six and giving but one pass. Buddy Hassett connected for three singles, none of which caused any damage.

MEN ON HORSEBACK

New York—From punch to polo, from the Yankee Stadium to the green-carpeted field at Meadow Brook. Max Baer and Lou Nova, having done their stuff, step back as the English and Americans warm up for the next major event in a crowded June.

It has been twenty-five years since an English team last won at Meadow Brook. In 1914, Capt. Tomkinson, Capt. Cheape, Major Barrett and Capt. Lockett—probably the best team that ever came over the sea—beat Rene La Montagne, the Waterburys and Dev Milburn. That was in June. In July the guns began to roar from Belgium to the Marne and Leslie Cheape was killed.

Seven years rolled by before there was another clash for the Westchester Cup. In 1921 Louis Stoddard, Watson Webb and Dev Milburn went to England, picked up an American kid named Tommy Hitchcock who was a student at Oxford—and brought back the cup. Since then there have been four series—at Meadow Brook in 1924, 1927 and 1930 and at Hurlingham in 1936 when, as a sporting gesture, the Americans went across to give the Britons a whirl on their home heath.

America Favored Again

This time the odds ride again with the Americans. The team composed of Hitchcock—the same Tommy who joined up from Oxford in 1921—Cecil Smith, Mike Phipps and either Stewart Iglehart or Winston Guest is favored to take the invaders in the series that begins on Sunday and will be run through the next two Sundays—it already has been agreed that although the series will be decided, two games out of three, all three will be played.

However, the dope is that, even if the Americans do win in straight games, they will be as close as those played at Hurlingham three years ago when the English team went down, 10 to 9 and 8 to 6 before a team that, while lacking Hitchcock, still was presumed to be considerably stronger than any the could be mustered over there. This year the English have made greater preparations for the matches than ever they did before.

Their pony strings, put together with the best horse flesh that could be combed from England, Ireland, India and the Argentine, have been in this country for months. Three of their first string players—Aidan Roark, Gerald Balding and Eric Tyrrell-Martin—have spent years in America and are thoroughly familiar not only with our style of play but with the men against whom they will be playing, having played against them or with them many times before. Their fourth man, well known these last two years in California but a stranger to Meadow Brook, is Bob Skene, who was born in India but calls Australia his home.

The Best Since 1914

Skene, tall, dark and broad-shouldered but weighing, in spite of his six feet, only 154 pounds, so that he is the lightest of the Britons, was born in Assarn, India, in 1914, the year that England triumphed for the last ime. According to Earl Hopping, a first-rate polo player in his own right, Skene is the best No. 1 an English team has had since 1914, when Capt. Tomkinson led the raid on Meadow Brook. He learned the game from his father, hooked up with the famous Ashton brothers later and has played all over Australia, in India and in England and has made a couple of trips to California.

He is a hard rider, fearless and a brilliant shot. From the standpoint of the crowd, he will be the most compelling figure in the blue and brown of England when the teams ride out to play—and I imagine the American players will be watching him pretty carefully, too.

Roark, now a motion picture executive in Hollywood, has had a wide experience in American polo. He has been on three West Coast championship teams, played for the West against the East in 1933 and 1934 and, curiously enough, went to England last year as a member of the Texas Rangers who won four open turnaments during the London season. This will be his first appearance in a Westchester Cup series. He was a member of the squad in 1930 but illness prevented him from playing.

Either Guest or Iglehart

Until a week or so ago it seemed the American team would be the "dream" or "perfect" (40-goal combination) of Hitchcock, Smith, Phipps and Iglehart. And then Winston Guest, once a 10-goal player, too, but now rated at 8 goals, came riding back to threaten Iglehart's place on the team.

The American Defense Committee—Bobby Strawbridge, Milburn, Hitchcock, Jock and Sonny Whitney and Major Louis Beard—have not made their final selections as yet. But whether they give the ultimate nod to Guest or Iglehart, it will be a formidable array that Tommy Hitchcock will lead out on International Field these next three Sundays. There isn't anything any of them can't do with a mallet, a ball and a horse.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, June 2 (AP)—Joe Jacobs spoke emphatically, and as clearly as teeth clenched over the draught end of a long cigar would permit.

"Galento," he declared, "would have licked both of them in there tonight."

Little Joe, whose remark naturally was unprejudiced inasmuch as he manages Tony Galento, sat with bright brown eyes fixed vacantly on the ring where Lou Nova had been declared winner over Max Baer by a technical knockout a few short minutes before.

Workmen started dismantling the arena, the bang of hammers providing an overtone to the clackety-clack of typewriters. The lights, except for the brilliant glare over the ring, went out, leaving Yankee Staudium a vast, black void. Still he sat there. He might have been trying to visualize what will happen on the same spot when his Tony Galento meets Joe Louis June 28.

He had taken the halter off Tony for the evening, and the big orange from Orange, N. J., had enjoyed a field day at the ringside, his squat, blimp-like body and round head bobbing around as he greeted friend and foe. He waddled into the ring for an introduction, standing there stroking his pumkin paunch like a man fresh up from a Thanksgiving dinner. He greeted Louis, "I wished him luck," he explained later.

Joe Jacobs again broke his reverie.

"Nova looked bad and Baer looked terrible," he continued. "I said before the fight that Baer must win inside of five rounds if he won at all. As soon as he came out of his corner I knew he was finished. Instead of coming out swinging with a wild flurry of punches like he used to do, he took one or two swings and let up.

"I had tried to get Baer to meet Galento in Philadelphia," Joe explained. "I told him the bout would draw $500,000 there. But no, he wanted Nova. Said Nova was a soft touch. And look what happens. He takes a beating, and the fight doesn't draw a hundred grand."

Regardless of Jacobs' unprejudiced opinion, it is this corner's belief that Lou Nova wasn't so bad, but that he is still far from ready for a shot at Louis. When he fought his fight, eternally moving, stabbing and chopping, he was the master. When he elected to slug he flirted with the canvas.

He had courage and determination and stamina. Baer had courage and determination but his legs were leaden after a few rounds.

Never let it be said that he quit. He took an unmerciful beating, sometimes without rebuttal, and was on his feet at the end.

His eyes told the story of his gradual resignation. He stalked from the corner at the start of the first round with a satanic expression, eyes narrowed to mere slits. A bogeyman of the nursery. As the rounds wore on the expression lost its menace ,became haunted. At the end he was a tired old man, his eyes, by that time slits from the pumping of Nova's fists, without trace of venom.

But he didn't quit.

Yanks Pound Four Indian Pitchers For 17 to 5 Win

"Bronx Bombers" Slam out 18 Hits; Donald Wins Fifth Game

Cleveland, June 2 (AP)—The world champion New York Yankees poured on their vaunted power today to overwhelm the Cleveland Indians 17 to 5 for the second straight win of their series.

Altogether the Bronx bombers exploded 18 hits, including two home runs, into the laps of four Cleveland pitchers, who were upset so badly they contributed 14 bases on balls.

Meanwhile rookie Atley Donald spaced 11 hits to gain his fifth victory without defeat. After scoring once in the first on a hit and an error, the Indians went runless until the seventh when Jeff Heath's homer with one on sparked a three-run rally. They got their other tally on two hits and an error in the eighth.

PAPA BAER SNARLS AT LI'L LOU

Max Baer, onetime heavyweight champion of the world, took a fearful shellacking at the hands of young Lou Nova at the Yankee Stadium in New York City. The fifteen round fight was stopped less than a minute and a half after the eleventh round began. Baer was bleeding badly from a cut lip. Youth had its day, for Baer's Sunday punch failed to floor the younger Nova in the third round. Nova's fine staying power kept him on his feet to win the battle.

Ralph Guldahl Takes Lead in Goodall Tourney

BY BILL BONI

New York, June 2 (AP) — Ralph Guldahl, the national open golf champion, changed his tactics today. The man who has won his two major titles by coming from behind down the stretch turned into a front-runner as he shaved three strokes from the Fresh Meadow Country Club's par for 36 holes and moved into first place in the $5,000 Goodall round-robin tournament.

After 54 holes, and with 72 still to go, the Madison (N.J.) pro has a score of plus 23, representing that many winning holes in three matches with six rivals. Starting today's play in fifth place, Guldahl fired a morning-round 68, two under standard figures, to be 6 up on Olin Dutra, himself a former open champion, and 4 up on Ben Hogan.

In the afternoon, Ralph followed up with a 69 that left him 3 up on Jimmy Thomson and 5 up on Horton Smith. For his morning score he pocketed the special $50 prize for the day's low round, and with his 36-hole effort he took the lead in the race for $1,000 top money that will go to the winner on Sunday afternoon.

Tomorrow he will go up against Harry Cooper and Tony Penna. Cooper is the only other man in the 15-star field who has yet to lose a match. The dapper little veteran from Eastern Point, Conn., despite the fact he was scrambling all day, came up with a morning 69 that picked up 5 points against Dick Metz, runner-up in the open last year, and blond Jimmy Hines of Great Neck, N. Y.

In the afternoon Cooper came out on top in the closest match of the entire day. With a par 70 that included four birdies and as many bogeys in the first ten holes, and finieshed up with eight straight pars, Harry beat Sam Snead by 1 up and Paul Runyan by two, to boost himself into second place with a plus 15 score.

Snead, who won last year's inaugural after a two-hole play off with Gene Sarazen, slid down into third place with a plus 13 rating. The West Virginia mountaineer added two points to his first-round total of 11 by winning four holes from Denny Shute while losing two to Tony Penna, and against Cooper and Runyan barely managed to finish all even.

South Branch Loop Will Open Campaign

Moorefield, W. Va., June 2—With their lineups liberally sprinkled with newcomers, the four clubs of the newly-organized South Branch Valley Baseball League will launch the loop campaign this weekend.

Moorefield's Midgets, 1936 champions of the Bi-State League and expected to be among the leading title contenders, will play the Mathias Majors on the latter's field Saturday afternoon and on Sunday will tangle with the Petersburg Merchants here. Petersburg will meet CCC Camp Hardy tomorrow at Petersburg. In another Sunday clash, Mathias will play Camp Hardy on the Triple-C diamond.

Each team will play the other six times during the season. Players must be residents of one of the towns in the circuit. Both Petersburg and Moorefield have a number of former high school tossers on their rosters.

WHEN THE FIGHT WAS STOPPED

Here is Max Baer, former heavyweight champion of the world, snapped immediately after the referee stopped the scheduled fifteen round fight in the eleventh round. Baer's mouth was badly cut and he was bleeding profusely. He was barely able to defend himself against a badly-tired Nova. The youngster's staying power pulled him through a critical third round, when Baer landed his Sunday right and had Nova groggy. After that it was Nova's fight to the end.

Declares Vale Summit School Won One-Room Schools Track Meet

The News Sports Editor:

"Altnough Little Orleans school was proclaimed track champions of the one room schools at Cumberland fair grounds on Wednesday, May 24th it is deserving that the public know that Vale Summit is rightfully the winner.

"According to officials of the meet, Little Orleans school had 44 points and Vale Summit was second with 43 tallies.

"The following statements are not made to criticise in any way the Little Orleans school, for there is no doubt that school earned every point it was credited to, but on the other hand Vale Summit was as I see it deprived on its points.

"Catherine Leake a student in the seventh grade at Vale Summit school was entered in the dodge ball throw for distance (12 years and over) when she completed her throw the ball had hit on the 81 ft. line and as no other school had equaled that distance, the referee stated that she need not take her remaining two throws as three chances were allowed each one.

"The referee wrote her name on the entry sheet and told her to go to the table under the grandstand and she would be given her badge and credited with 1st place points. When she arrived she was told the event had been closed and another school had been credited with the points but officials stated she would receive her badge and 1st place points, after she had been presented with the badge and officials saw she represented Vale Summit school on the entry card, they refused the points. Their argument was that she was too late for the throw that the event had been closed.

"If she was too late for the throw, why was she permitted to throw? why was she presented the badge? and on the other hand anyone who was participating in dodge ball games, how could they be at both places at once? It was previously anounced that the dodge ball throw would be left open to

RICHARD DIX AS SAM HOUSTON

"FAST AND LOOSE" OPENS AT MARYLAND MONDAY

Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell in "Fast and Loose," the gay Metro Goldwyn Mayer picture opening Monday at the Maryland Theatre. Also starring in the film are Jo Ann Sayers, Reginald Owen, Joan Marsh and Ralph Morgan.

Theatres Today

Dix Considers Sam Houston a Showman

Richard Dix believes that Hollywood, a city of showmen, could take a lesson or two from Sam Houston.

Dix portrays the great American in Republic's "Man of Conquest," which opens today at the Strand Theatre. The screen star made a long and deep study of Houston's life in preparation for the role, and became intimately acquainted with Houston's character.

"One of the greatest showman who ever lived," Dix describes Houston. "He was colorful to the tip of his toes. Take for instance the time Houston came to see Andrew Jackson as the Ambassador of the Cherokee Indian nation. That's an outstanding example."

Dix refers to the Washington ballroom sequence in "Man of Conquest." A lavish, ultra social, brilliant affair attended by the dignitaries of foreign countries and the cabinet members of the United States. Into the ballroom stalks Sam Houston, with his sense of the dramatic timed properly. He wears a breach clout, a leather vest, mocassins, a blanket on his shoulders, and feathers in his hair. With him, Indian friends garbed in long headdresses, stalk menacingly.

"That was one of the most dramatic entrances in history," Dix says. "Houston had come cross-country to see Jackson about Indian friends in Tennessee, and the presidential ball was as good a place as any. What a shock for that elite gathering!"

In addition to Dix, other members of a star-studded cast include Gail Patrick, Joan Fontaine, Edward Ellis and Ralph Morgan.

Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor in "Lucky Night"

Co-starring Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor in a happy-go-lucky story of Manhattan life, "Lucky Night," current attraction at the Maryland Theatre offers screengoers one of the gayest and most sparkling comedy romances of the year.

That Myrna Loy, heroine of "The Thin Man" series and other comedies, proves herself to be at home in this zany story was to be anticipated. But that Robert Taylor, the dramatic star of such films as "Camille," "The Crowd Roars," and "Stand Up and Fight," should reveal an ingratiating flair for comedy action comes as an eventful surprise.

With laughter the keynote of "Lucky Night," the story unfolds the whimsical and hilarious adventures of Cora Johnson, daughter of a steel magnate, who has broken her engagement for the fourth time, and Bill Overton, the playboy whose luck went against him. These two meet on a park bench, and from then on frolic and gamble, quarrel and love, get married, and separate, and again reunite through a series of dizzy complications that only true love and their mutual sense of humor are able to vanquish.

Myrna Loy plays the role of Cora Jordan with all the gayety and irrepressible spirit of her "Thin Man" characterizations. Taylor is, of course, the devil-may-care Bill Overton, rollicking through a brilliant comedy performance of the part and proving himself as thoroughly at home in the lighter vein as he has in romantic leads.

In the excellent supporting cast are Joseph Allen, Henry O'Neill, Douglas Fowley, Bernard Nedell, Charles Lane, Bernardene Hayes, Gladys Blake, Marjorie Main, Edward Gargan, Irving Bacon and Oscar O'Shea.

150 Real Cowboys Ride In "Hopalong" Story

One hundred and fifty cowboys, including some of the best riders and ropers of ranch, rodeo and screen, are in the cast of "North of the Rio Grande," latest screen adventure of "Hopalong" Cassidy, which is now at the Garden Theatre.

Headed by William Boyd, who plays the role of "Hopalong," the cowboys take part in a thrilling locomotive chase and in a battle with a band of train robbers which it is Boyd's task to wipe out in the film. The cast also includes Russell Hayden, George Hayes and Stephen Morris.

A timely expose of a metropolitan city's slums and their crime-breeding effects upon youth, Columbia's "Juvenile Court" now at the Garden Theatre with Paul Kelly, Rita Hayworth and Frankie Darro in featured roles.

"Western Jamboree" and "Dark Rapture"

Closing today at the Embassy Theatre is a twin hit attraction consisting of your number one western singing and shooting star, Gene Autry in "Western Jamboree" with Smiley Burnette and Joe Frisco. The second feature is the jungle thriller "Dark Rapture". You will also see the fourteenth chapter of the serial "The Spider's Web".

Twin Attraction for Embassy Tomorrow

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy Theatre will be double feature attraction with Mischa Auer, Mary Boland, Edward Everett Horton and the Little tough guys with Jackie Searl in "Little Tough Guys In Society". The second feature will be Rex Lease and Muriel Evans in the thriller "Ten Laps To Go".

Volatile Lupe Velez in "The Girl From Mexico"

Lupe Velez, that little package of Mexican dynamite, makes her return to the American screen in a movie which has the advance reputation of being one of season's gayest romantic comedies, The Girl From Mexico, starting today at the Liberty.

Latin Lupe has rarely had such a perfect vehicle. She depicts a hot-tempered singing lass from below the Rio Grande imported by a young advertising executive for a national network program.

Lupe invades New York in a blaze of action. The big town enthralls her and she demands to see the sights. Her benefactor is busy and his shiftless uncle is induced to be her escort. Wrestling matches, baseball games and the hot spots help the couple do" the town red-hot. When the time arrives for Lupe's audition for the radio program she is voiceless and finds herself out of a job.

Dix Considers Sam Houston a Showman

Richard Dix believes that Hollywood, a city of showmen, could take a lesson or two from Sam Houston.

Dix portrays the great American in Republic's "Man of Conquest," which opens today at the Strand Theatre. The screen star made a long and deep study of Houston's life in preparation for the role, and became intimately acquainted with Houston's character.

"One of the greatest showman who ever lived," Dix describes Houston. "He was colorful to the tip of his toes. Take for instance the time Houston came to see Andrew Jackson as the Ambassador of the Cherokee Indian nation. That's an outstanding example."

Dix refers to the Washington ballroom sequence in "Man of Conquest." A lavish, ultra social, brilliant affair attended by the dignitaries of foreign countries and the cabinet members of the United States. Into the ballroom stalks Sam Houston, with his sense of the dramatic timed properly. He wears a breach clout, a leather vest, mocassins, a blanket on his shoulders, and feathers in his hair. With him, Indian friends garbed in long headdresses, stalk menacingly.

"That was one of the most dramatic entrances in history," Dix says. "Houston had come cross-country to see Jackson about Indian friends in Tennessee, and the presidential ball was as good a place as any. What a shock for that elite gathering!"

In addition to Dix, other members of a star-studded cast include Gail Patrick, Joan Fontaine, Edward Ellis and Ralph Morgan.

Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor in "Lucky Night"

Co-starring Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor in a happy-go-lucky story of Manhattan life, "Lucky Night," current attraction at the Maryland Theatre offers screengoers one of the gayest and most sparkling comedy romances of the year.

That Myrna Loy, heroine of "The Thin Man" series and other comedies, proves herself to be at home in this zany story was to be anticipated. But that Robert Taylor, the dramatic star of such films as "Camille," "The Crowd Roars," and "Stand Up and Fight," should reveal an ingratiating flair for comedy action comes as an eventful surprise.

With laughter the keynote of "Lucky Night," the story unfolds the whimsical and hilarious adventures of Cora Johnson, daughter of a steel magnate, who has broken her engagement for the fourth time, and Bill Overton, the playboy whose luck went against him. These two meet on a park bench, and from then on frolic and gamble, quarrel and love, get married, and separate, and again reunite through a series of dizzy complications that only true love and their mutual sense of humor are able to vanquish.

Myrna Loy plays the role of Cora Jordan with all the gayety and irrepressible spirit of her "Thin Man" characterizations. Taylor is, of course, the devil-may-care Bill Overton, rollicking through a brilliant comedy performance of the part and proving himself as thoroughly at home in the lighter vein as he has in romantic leads.

In the excellent supporting cast are Joseph Allen, Henry O'Neill, Douglas Fowley, Bernard Nedell, Charles Lane, Bernardene Hayes, Gladys Blake, Marjorie Main, Edward Gargan, Irving Bacon and Oscar O'Shea.

150 Real Cowboys Ride In "Hopalong" Story

One hundred and fifty cowboys, including some of the best riders and ropers of ranch, rodeo and screen, are in the cast of "North of the Rio Grande," latest screen adventure of "Hopalong" Cassidy, which is now at the Garden Theatre.

Headed by William Boyd, who plays the role of "Hopalong," the cowboys take part in a thrilling locomotive chase and in a battle with a band of train robbers which it is Boyd's task to wipe out in the film. The cast also includes Russell Hayden, George Hayes and Stephen Morris.

A timely expose of a metropolitan city's slums and their crime-breeding effects upon youth, Columbia's "Juvenile Court" now at the Garden Theatre with Paul Kelly, Rita Hayworth and Frankie Darro in featured roles.

"Western Jamboree" and "Dark Rapture"

Closing today at the Embassy Theatre is a twin hit attraction consisting of your number one western singing and shooting star, Gene Autry in "Western Jamboree" with Smiley Burnette and Joe Frisco. The second feature is the jungle thriller "Dark Rapture". You will also see the fourteenth chapter of the serial "The Spider's Web".

Twin Attraction for Embassy Tomorrow

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy Theatre will be double feature attraction with Mischa Auer, Mary Boland, Edward Everett Horton and the Little tough guys with Jackie Searl in "Little Tough Guys In Society". The second feature will be Rex Lease and Muriel Evans in the thriller "Ten Laps To Go".

Volatile Lupe Velez in "The Girl From Mexico"

Lupe Velez, that little package of Mexican dynamite, makes her return to the American screen in a movie which has the advance reputation of being one of season's gayest romantic comedies, The Girl From Mexico, starting today at the Liberty.

Latin Lupe has rarely had such a perfect vehicle. She depicts a hot-tempered singing lass from below the Rio Grande imported by a young advertising executive for a national network program.

Lupe invades New York in a blaze of action. The big town enthralls her and she demands to see the sights. Her benefactor is busy and his shiftless uncle is induced to be her escort. Wrestling matches, baseball games and the hot spots help the couple do" the town red-hot. When the time arrives for Lupe's audition for the radio program she is voiceless and finds herself out of a job.

The Eckhart unit of the Square Circle Association met this week and selected the site for its proposed new club house, which is to be located on the Piney Mountain Road, about 500 yards from the National highway at lower Eckhart on property owned by George Filsinger. Work on the construction of the house will be done by the club which boasts a membership of 106 local sportsmen.

The officers of the Eckhart unit are: William Filsinger, president; Marshall Porter, vice-president; George Walters, secretary, and John Watson, treasurer. The club, organized less than three years, has been meeting at the McMurdo service station, Clarysville, but the increase in membership and the desire for larger quarters prompted the members to own a home of their own. The unit, which is to be incorporated, has made considerable money from shooting matches during the past two years, much of which was used to purchase 362 rabbits and other game which was released in local forests.

Pending the completion of the new club house, the future meetings of the unit will be held every Monday evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of William Filsinger, Eckhart. Members and friends of the organization will be welcomed at all meetings.

Morgantown Hit By Severe Storm

Electrical Disturbance Disrupts Telephone System; Oil Tanks Afire

Morgantown, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—An electrical storm accompanied by a driving rain put Morgantown's telephone system out of commission temporarily, caused three oil tanks to catch fire and did considerable other damage today.

The storm struck about 11:30 a. m. and a rainfall of 1.54 inches was recorded at the weather bureau in an hour.

A. H. Clark, manager of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, said the breakdown in service was caused when flooded manholes resulted in damage to three of seven cables leading into the central office. Telephone communication to outside points also was cut off.

Service was partially restored during the afternoon and officials said repairs would be completed tonight.

The oil tanks ignited by lightning were owned by the Eureka Pipeline Company. Each had a capacity of 28,000 barrels but none was full.

There was no danger the spectacular blaze would spread to 30 other tanks in the field because of the distance separating them. About 30 men battled the flames with chemicals.

Lightning struck the Central school building in the heart of the city but only knocked a hole in the roof.

The new unit will embrace all child welfare services, services to state wards, supervising and licensing of private child caring institutions and the supervision of the probation and parole program.

Garnet also announced elimination of the position of chief of the bureau of business management, formerly held by Don Armitage. Garnette said Armitage was in the central clearing index, relief statistical unit, "for the present."

Former divisions of the business bureau will hereafter operate independently with T. J. Ingersoll as chief auditor, G. G. McFerran as disbursing officer, Maurice Woodell as office manager and Peyton H. Bray in charge of commodity distribution.

Other officers chosen at the annual business meeting, a feature of commencement week on the campus, were Raymond Salvati of Holden, Logan county, first vice president and Robert G. Kelly of Charleston, second vice president.

Executive council members are Hodges, Brooks Fleming, Jr., of Fairmont and J. French Robinson of Pittsburgh. David W. Jacobs of Morgantown will continue as executive secretary and treasurer.

Alumni gathered after the business session at a luncheon before splitting up to attend various group receptions and programs in their honor.

Dr. Charles B. Jolliffe, a member of the class of 1915, was the luncheon speaker. Emphasizing the importance of research, he said:

"It is only by a constant development of new goods and new services that we may expect to re-engage the man-power released by technological improvements in established industry.

"The market for every new commodity eventually reaches a saturation point and becomes primarily a replacement market, so that a more efficient technology reduces the number of workers in that field."

John W. Davis of Clarksburg and New York, the Democratic presidential nominee in 1924, spoke at the luncheon of law school graduates.

Tomorrow, more than 500 candidates will be presented with degrees in the annual commencement exercises. Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, President of the University of Wisconsin will speak.

Eckhart Group Meets

The Eckhart unit of the Square Circle Association met this week and selected the site for its proposed new club house, which is to be located on the Piney Mountain Road, about 500 yards from the National highway at lower Eckhart on property owned by George Filsinger. Work on the construction of the house will be done by the club which boasts a membership of 106 local sportsmen.

The officers of the Eckhart unit are: William Filsinger, president; Marshall Porter, vice-president; George Walters, secretary, and John Watson, treasurer. The club, organized less than three years, has been meeting at the McMurdo service station, Clarysville, but the increase in membership and the desire for larger quarters prompted the members to own a home of their own. The unit, which is to be incorporated, has made considerable money from shooting matches during the past two years, much of which was used to purchase 362 rabbits and other game which was released in local forests.

Pending the completion of the new club house, the future meetings of the unit will be held every Monday evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of William Filsinger, Eckhart. Members and friends of the organization will be welcomed at all meetings.

Morgantown Hit By Severe Storm

Electrical Disturbance Disrupts Telephone System; Oil Tanks Afire

Morgantown, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—An electrical storm accompanieed by a driving rain put Morgantown's telephone system out of commission temporarily, caused three oil tanks to catch fire and did considerable other damage today.

The storm struck about 11:30 a. m. and a rainfall of 1.54 inches was recorded at the weather bureau in an hour.

A. H. Clark, manager of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, said the breakdown in service was caused when flooded manholes resulted in damage to three of seven cables leading into the central office. Telephone communication to outside points also was cut off.

Service was partially restored during the afternoon and officials said repairs would be completed tonight.

The oil tanks ignited by lightning were owned by the Eureka Pipeline Company. Each had a capacity of 28,000 barrels but none was full.

There was no danger the spectacular blaze would spread to 30 other tanks in the field because of the distance separating them. About 30 men battled the flames with chemicals.

Lightning struck the Central school building in the heart of the city but only knocked a hole in the roof.

Charleston, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—Director A. W. Garnett of the State Department of Public Assistance announced today reorganization of several divisions and bureaus to affect reductions in personnel and increase efficiency.

The principal change was coordination of all divisions of medical work under the bureau of medical service, with Dr. Donald L. Butterfield as chief.

The bureau wil include the division of crippled children which formerly was a part of the children's bureau, the division of adult physical rehabilitation which formerly was an independent unit, and the Trachoma division.

The new unit will embrace all child welfare services, services to state wards, supervising and licensing of private child caring institutions and the supervision of the probation and parole program.

Garnet also announced elimination of the position of chief of the bureau of business management, formerly held by Don Armitage. Garnette said Armitage was in the central clearing index, relief statistical unit, "for the present."

Former divisions of the business bureau will hereafter operate independently with T. J. Ingersoll as chief auditor, G. G. McFerran as disbursing officer, Maurice Woodell as office manager and Peyton H. Bray in charge of commodity distribution.

Other officers chosen at the annual business meeting, a feature of commencement week on the campus, were Raymond Salvati of Holden, Logan county, first vice president and Robert G. Kelly of Charleston, second vice president.

Executive council members are Hodges, Brooks Fleming, Jr., of Fairmont and J. French Robinson of Pittsburgh. David W. Jacobs of Morgantown will continue as executive secretary and treasurer.

Alumni gathered after the business session at a luncheon before splitting up to attend various group receptions and programs in their honor.

"It is only by a constant development of new goods and new services that we may expect to re-engage the man-power released by technological improvements in established industry.

"The market for every new commodity eventually reaches a saturation point and becomes primarily a replacement market, so that a more efficient technology reduces the number of workers in that field."

Question of Land Condemnation Is Issue at Hinton

Power Company Protests Government Taking Land for Dam Site

Hinton, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—The old question of land condemnation stood out again today as one of the obstacles confronting the proposed Bluestone flood control dam, which was included in the war department appropriations bill passed by the senate.

At Huntington, the U. S. engineers office said that while $2,000,000 was earmarked in the bill for land purchase, nothing could be done until condemnation proceedings have been settled. The total estimated cost of the dam and reservoir is $14,000,000.

The West Virginia Power Company has protested the government's acquisition of land for a reservoir on the New River dam site near here, and the case is tentatively set in district federal court at Bluefield on June 26.

About two years ago the government withdrew its condemnation suits for reseryoir land after the original appropriation expired.

It was thirty years ago that talk was first heard about a dam across New River here. That talk was built around hydro-electric power possibilities.

In 1935, President Roosevelt, by executive order, authorized the project as a flood preventative and earmarked $1,000,000 for surveys and core drillings.

The president's authority was questioned by power companies, who contended relief funds could not be designated, without congressional authority, for flood control projects. The U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the president.

Surveys for a reservoir to cover 610,000 acre-feet of water were completed in 1936, and plans and specifications for a wall of concrete 170 feet high and 2,000 feet wide were forwarded to the war department for final approval.

The dam, engineers said, would create a pool thirty-seven miles long, stretching to Narrows, Va.

Poffenbarger Had Legal Right To Slay Tom Collins

Williamson, W. Va., June 2. (AP)—Preliminary investigation showed that Leonard Poffenbarger was within his rights in slaying Thomas "Logan" Collins, who tried to force entry into his home, Assistant Prosecutor O. C. VanCamp said today.

VanCamp said five witnesses corroborated the 38-year-old unemployed miner's story that he was forced to shoot even though Collins held six-year-old Harold Poffenbarger in his arms.

VanCamp said the state would ask only a "nominal" bond for Poffenbarger when a formal murder charge is filed. The charge, said VanCamp would be allowed to follow the usual routine so that Poffenbarger could be definitely cleared.

He asserted the invesetigation revealed it was a case of justifiable homicide.

Poffenbarger Had Legal Right To Slay Tom Collins

Williamson, W. Va., June 2. (AP)—Preliminary investigation showed that Leonard Poffenbarger was within his rights in slaying Thomas "Logan" Collins, who tried to force entry into his home, Assistant Prosecutor O. C. VanCamp said today.

VanCamp said five witnesses corroborated the 38-year-old unemployed miner's story that he was forced to shoot even though Collins held six-year-old Harold Poffenbarger in his arms.

VanCamp said the state would ask only a "nominal" bond for Poffenbarger when a formal murder charge is filed. The charge, said VanCamp would be allowed to follow the usual routine so that Poffenbarger could be definitely cleared.

He asserted the investigation revealed it was a case of justifiable homicide.

Physicians Laud Noble Profession Of Modern Nurse

Convention Delegates Urged To Organize For More Education

Continuing advancement was urged upon more than 300 "women in white" by physicians last night as three state-wide nurses' groups opened a two-day conference here.

"You can't stand still," Dr. Arthur H. Hawkins, veteran Cumberland surgeon, told the nurses, heartily endorsing a suggestion made Dr. Dan Fisher, of the State Department of Health.

Dr. Fisher, who preceded Dr. Hawkins on the program held at Carroll Hall, recommended formation of local nurses' organizations to insure cooperative advancement. Dr. Fisher stressed the value of forums, lectures, demonstrations, and other activities which such a set-up would make possible.

His recommendation was applauded by Dr. Hawkins, who suggested that the nurses form county organizations similar to the medical associations.

More Education Demanded

The demands of modern nursing make it "absolutely necessary" for nurses to continue their education even after they receive their diplomas, the doctors declared.

The woman in white—members of the Maryland State Nurses Association, the Maryland League of nursing Education, and the Maryland State Organization for Public Health and Industrial Nursing—also heard themselves praised as "invaluable assistants" to the medical profession.

Dr. Hawkins, lauding their "noble profession," asserted that medical science "could not have progressed without them."

Urging them to be "sympathetic" as well as efficient, he told them that they had a grave responsibility as the "intermediary between the physician and the patient."

Stresses Recent Progress

The surgeon stressed the great forward strides made here since he began practicing medicine in 1901.

"The Western Maryland hospital was little more than a shack then," he recalled. "Few of the nurses could speak correct English, spell, or write.

There were no particular education requirements back in those days," he said.

Despite their lack of formal education, many of these nurses were real assets to the community, he declared, because they were "in earnest" and had a real desire to serve.

Dr. Hawkins enlivened his address with anecdotes concerning incidents in the operating room.

He, as well as the other speakers, received a hearty ovation from the audience.

Dr. Koon Gives Welcome

The nurses were welcomed to the city by Dr. Thomas W. Koon—as mayor, physician, and head of the city health department. He, like the other speakers, praised them for their service and reminded them that theirs was a noble calling with a great tradition—from Florence Nightingale to the present.

Harvey Weiss, superintendent of Memorial hospital, presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers. He also presented Miss Maud M. Gardner, president of the Maryland State Nurse Association, who spoke briefly, taking occasion to praise the Fort Hill band, which under the direction of Victor H. Baumann, played several selections at the opening of the session.

The Maryland association had opened its session in the afternoon with a meeting at City Hall at which Regina M. Donahue, state chairman of the private duty section, presided.

Baltimore Nurses Speak

Speakers included Alma E. Gault, superintendent of nurses, Union Memorial hospital, Baltimore; Lillian P. Sewell, superintendent of nurses, Maryland General hospital, Baltimore; Estelle B. McLeod, hourly nurse, Central Director of Registered Nurses, Baltimore; and Anne D. Zerhusen, anesthetist, Bronchoscopic clinic, Mercy hospital, Baltimore.

The Maryland League will meet at 9:30 a. m. today at the assembly room at Memorial hospital, where Marian E. Thuma, assistant superintendent of nurses, Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, will preside. Angela M. Shipley, education director of the Maryland State Board of Examiners of Nurses will extend a welcome to the group.

Demonstrations Today

Demonstrations under the direction of Mildred Constantine, superintendent of nurses, Memorial hospital, will be given with Allegany and Memorial nurses taking part.

Luncheon will be served at noon at the Central Y. M. C. A. and at 2 p. m. the public health group will meet at City Hall. Bessie Lee Maston will preside.

Speakers will be Eleanor M. Immler, supervisor, Babies Milk Fund Association, Baltimore; Lilly T. Harman, supervising nurse, Eastern Health District, Baltimore; and Elizabeth Ferguson, former nurse-midwife, Charles county.

Doctors To Give Tea

The Allegany-Garrett County Medical Society will give a tea at the Cumberland Country Club at 4 p. m. At 8 p. m. dinner will be served at the Shrine Country Club, with Maud M. Gardner, president of the Maryland State Nurses Association, presiding.

Virginia K. Betzold, director, principles and practice of nursing, Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, and Helen Gassaway, chairman state committee, Red Cross Nursing Service, will speak.

Mrs. Howard L. Tolson will be chairman of Saturday's tea at the Country club, and Miss Grace Weber will have charge of the dinner at the Shrine club.

The committee assisting Mrs. Tolson is Mrs. H. W. Robinson, Mrs. W. R. Hodges Sr., Mrs. A. H. Hawkins, Mrs. Knight Reynolds, and Mrs. H. B. Marley. Nurses from the local hospitals will also assist.

Conventioning Nurses Are Early To Rise

Cumberland has seen many conventions, but never before one where the delegates get up for a "breakfast session" at 7:30 a. m.

Yet that is what the members of the Maryland State Organization for Public Health and Industrial Nursing proposed to do today.

Unable to work their own meeting into the crowded convention schedule at any other time, they decided to talk over their problems at breakfast at the Golden Gate Tea Room at an hour when most conventions would just be settling down for a bit of sleep.

Seasoned observers of conventions said last night that this nurses gathering seemed to be the most serious, hardest-working one of all.

Beer License Fees Bring in $3,773

Revenue from 272 alcoholic beverage licenses in Allegany county for the month of May amounted to $3,773, of which sum the county received $590, it was reported yesterday by R. Mason Hill, in the county commissioners' office.

The sum received by the county represents the amount paid by beer dispensers in unincorporated districts of the county. Incorporated towns received the following amounts: Cumberland, $2,399; Midland, $98; Lonaconing, $245; Frostburg, $343; and Westernport, $98.

The 272 dealers who paid these license fees are not to be confused with the 52 concerns in the county which now have licenses to sell hard liquor, it was explained yesterday. According to law, Allegany county is only allowed 52 such licenses at the present time. One liquor license is allowed for every 1,500 people in a county.

C.S.M.C. Veterans Plan For Annual Convention

Plans had been completed today by the Cumberland Inter-Unit Council, C.S.M.C., for participation in the eleventh national crusade convention, August 22-25, in Washington, and in the tenth anniversary veteran rally at Braddock Heights, Frederick, September 22-24.

The plans were made Thursday night at a meeting at the SS. Peter and Paul School at which Joseph F. Lewis, representative on the archdiocesan board of veterans, presided.

The following committe was appointed from this district for the national conventian: registration, Edwin Raphel; program, Kathryn F. Doerner; publicity, Thekla D. Price.

County Appoints New Constables

First Trial Magistrate Takes Oath of Office

Keeping step with the new magistrate's law which is now effective in Maryland, Clerk of Courts Robert Jackson yesterday swore in the first magistrate to qualify under the new law, and the county commissioners appointed ten constables.

Owen L. Porter of Frostburg, having qualified as a trial magistrate, yesterday posted a $5,000 bond and has the distinction of being the first magistrate in the county to take the oath from Clerk Jackson under the new law.

Raising his right hand, Porter took the oath stating that "I do swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States and that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to the State of Maryland and support the constitution and laws thereof, and that I will to the best of my skill and judgment, diligently and faithfully, without partiality or prejudice, execute the office of Justice of the Peace for Allegany county according to the constitution and laws of the state."

Although all except two of ten constables had been appointed prior to yesterday, the county commissioners reappointed the original eight and added two new constables at their regular Friday morning session.

Constables reappointed according to the terms of the new magistrate's law were Florian Wilson, Westernport; Matthew Muir, Lonaconing; Charles E. Robertson, Midland; Denzil Crowe, Frostburg; John W. Albright, Mt. Savage; James Jones, Cresaptown; Harold V. Bloom, Cumberland, and Walter Howser, Cumberland.

The two new appointments made yesterday were Harry Bailey, who will serve as constable in Barton, and Thomas Nash, who was appointed for McCoole.

With the constables appointed, all that remains to be done to carry out the provisions of the magistrate's law is qualifying nine more magistrates in Allegany county, Court House attaches said yesterday.

Players To Meet

A business meeting and rehearsal of the Gilbert and Sullivan Players will be held Monday evening at the Girl Scout headquarters on Greene street, it was announced yesterday.

Ex-Convict Takes Police Grilling Without Cracking

Smiles at Questions About Va. Robbery, Asks for Cigarette

A sardonic Cumberland man with a tattoo of a nude lady displayed prominently on his left forearm yesterday refused to crack under questioning by police who suspect him of being implicated in a Virginia armed robbery two weeks ago.

Picked up shortly after the arrest of Fred Iser, of Wiley Ford, who was charged with the possession of stolen property, Louis Piper, 24, smiled cynically at the queries of local officers and by way of reply asked for a cigarette.

Piper, who served two stretches in the penitentiary, told the officers in a slow drawl that his stomach "just couldn't stand another long stretch in the penitentiary."

He was picked up yesterday by Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe, County Investigator Terrance J. Boyle and Chief-of-Police C. V. Barncord, of Ridgeley, following Barncord's arrest of Iser.

Prisoner Won't Talk

When officers tried to pick the truth out of the deliberate Piper, they bumped into the code of the men who have served time behind prison bars. When told that Iser had implicated him in the stickup and robbery of a Virginia man, Piper refused to believe it, but added that he would "tell enough on that guy so that he would still be in jail when his children were 102, if he spilled anything on me."

Caught In Remote Home

Piper was taken into custody in a home in a remote section near Oldtown. Directed by a farmer, the officers surrounded the farmhouse upon arrival.

Piper, who was found inside, remarked that "I saw you guys coming when you were just starting down that hill yonder," indicating that he could have easily eluded their trap if he had cared to do so.

Although officers haven't proved anything on him as yet, they are of the belief that Piper was the man who aided Iser in robbing Robert P. Miller, of Lovettsville, Va., two weeks ago.

Thursday, Miller arrived in Ridgeley to identify Iser as one of the hitch hikers who pitched him out of his car after robbing him of his money and watch at gunpoint.

Unless the taciturn Piper chooses to talk, officers will probably recall Miller to take a look at their second suspect.

WPA Worker To Face Federal Grand Jury

Olin E. Broadwater, 22-year-old WPA worker, will be taken to Baltimore next week to face a federal grand jury.

He pleaded guilty to charges of stealing and forging a friend's WPA check when arraigned here before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett.

Broadwater, who lives near Bittinger, was arrested by U. S. Secret Service Agent James H. Dickerson, U. S. Deputy Marshal Howard P. Loughrie, and Garrett County Deputy Sheriff Spear. He was accused of stealing and forging a $15.84 check belonging to Glen T. Murphy, of RFD 2, Swanton, with whom he rode to work each day.

He told officers, "I don't know why I did it".

Crash Victim Better

Earl G. Young, 18, of 731 Columbia avenue, who was injured in an automobile mishap May 19 on the Oldtown Road near North Branch, was reported in a "good" condition last night at Memorial hospital. His left arm was amputated.

—The 1894 "S" mint dime and the 1913 Liberty Head nickel are two of the modern U. S. coins for which large sums are offered by numismatic companies.

The briefest presidential inaugural address was Washington's second, which contained 134 words.

Publicity Broadside Opens Fight To Get More Tourists on Route 40

The publicity guns which will advertise the National Highway to America's millions of tourists are already booming.

Celluloid badges boosting Route 40 are being distributed to filling station attendants, waitresses, and other persons who meet the traveling public.

Placards announcing membership in the National Highway U. S. 40 Association are appearing in establishments which have kicked in their share to the publicity kitty.

Now the reams of publicity are beginning to flow into the offices of newspapers and other disseminators of such home-town propaganda.

First publicity broadside from the association, of which Harry Manley, of Cumberland, is president, reveals the more or less startling information that the first iron bridge built in America is still in use on U. S. 40.

Historic Papers Free

In a quick follow-up, the association promises to send to anyone interested a fascimile of the Virginia Gazette, published in Williamsburg, Va., July 19, 1754, which carried George Washington's own official report of the battle of Fort Necessity.

It was in all probability the first newspaper dispatch sent out of these mountains. A copy of this rare and ancient paper was unearthed in London after a search of many months, and the fascimilies were prepared from it.

Persons desiring this fascimile can obtain it by dropping a postcard or letter to the National Highway U. S. 40 Association, Uniontown, Pa.

Before long, too, the association will have plenty of free copies available of a handsome little booklet outlining the history of Route 40 between St. Louis and Baltimore.

Oldest Iron Bridge Described

Now more about the oldest iron bridge in America. It is an 80-foot, single arch span crossing Dunlap's creek in Brownsville, Pa., and was completed on July 4, 1839, just 100 years ago.

The total cost of this bridge was $39,901.63, including a coat of gas tar and three coats of white lead paint; and today, after generations of rattling horse-drawn traffic, the bridge bears a steady stream of freight trucks, busses, and speeding passenger cars such as its builders never dreamed of.

The bridge was designed and erected by a Captain Richard Delafield, of the United States Army Engineers Corps, who later became superintendent of West Point and finally the army's chief engineer. His chief assistant was Lieutenant G. W. Cass, who later became president of the Northern Pacific railroad.

Attendance Champs Get Their Bit of Glory

Attendance champions were honored at Allegany high school assembly yesterday along with athletes and other senior leaders.

The mythical attendance crowns went to Josephine Compton and Franklin McIlwe, who have not missed a minute of school during four years, Principal Ralph R. Webster announced.

It was also announced that Geneva Lewis and Russell Harper missed but half a day; John Snyder, Charles Kreitzburg and William Burger, only one day; and John Miller only a day and a half.

Pastor Testifies For Crash Driver

'Made Quick Decision' Minister Tells Court

The Rev. Alfred E. Holst yesterday testified in Trial Magistrates court in behalf of the driver who crashed into the minister's car in LaVale and caused it to ram into a pole.

The driver on trial, Harry Gomer, of Frostburg, was found guilty of reckless driving, but was fined only $1 and costs.

The minister testified that a car stopped in front of Gomer, and that Gomer swung around it, colliding with the minister's car, which was coming from the opposite direction.

"A quick decision was needed," the preacher testified. "It was Gomer's misfortune that he made the wrong decision." Mr. Holst is pastor of the Seventh Day Adventist church.

Court Kept Busy

Trying traffic cases in Police and Trial Magistrates courts kept Magistrate Frank A. Perdew doubly busy yesterday.

Boyd Davis, of 479 Baltimore avenue, and Ellis Crawford, of Cresaptown, were each fined $1 in Police Court for careless driving. They were arrested Thursday afternoon following a collision at Market and Johnson streets.

James Logeston, of Flintstone, was acquitted of careless driving, while John W. Shea, of Frostburg, was fined $1 on the same charge.

In Magistrates Court, Orlando Massi, of Thomas, W. Va., forfeited $11.45 bond for reckless driving on the McMullen Highway. Charges were preferred by State Trooper George J. Miller.

One Guilty, One Freed

Apprehended after their machines collided on the Mt. Savage Road, Henry J. Getson, of Corriganville, was fined $1 and costs for reckless driving, and Harry E. Wolford, of 308 Mechanic street, was found not guilty. State Trooper Carl G. Storm made the arrests.

Bernard D. Clayton, of 879 Patterson avenue, picked up by Trooper Storm, was fined $10 and costs for speeding on the McMullen Highway. Joseph H. Stitcher, of 603 Shriver avenue, forfeited $5.75 bond for passing an automobile on the Mt. Savage Road when the way ahead was not clear.

Cresap Society Head To Address Members

President Lewis, of Harpster, Ohio, will address the Cumberland chapter and will also introduce J. Alexis Shriver, of the Maryland Historical Society.

Commenting on the work of the organization, President Lewis stated recently, "after twenty years in the accumulation of numerous details and verification of names, dates and service of our ancestors, we are in a position to submit in printed form for permanent record, conclusive proofs of their contribution to our country when bravery and sacrifice was most needed."

Officers Are Elected By Locust Grove P.-T.A.

Plans have been made by the group for a celebration to be held Friday night, June 9, in honor of Mrs. Caldoras tenth anniversary as a teacher of this school.

Refreshments were served at the meeting under the direction of Mrs. Vernon Cost and Mrs. Patrick Lynch.

Amtower, who also has attended the University of West Virginia, expects to continue his studies in theological seminary and prepare for the ministry. He has been active in debate, dramatics, the speakers' bureau, and intramural sports.

May Drought Broken

Rainfall was scarce in Cumberland in May with precipitation for the month reported as 1.52 inches, compared to the normal of 3.33 inches. Rainfall on June 1 measured .7 of an inch, or nearly half of that for the entire month of May.

New Hunting Licenses Go on Sale; Cumberland Policeman Gets No. 1

The new hunting licenses are now on sale at the Clerk of Courts office in the Court House, and hunters who always relish the thought of grabbing that desirable No. 1 license are already out of luck.

Many of the 5,600 some hunters in Allegany county like to grab off the low numbers, but this year, Frank A. Shober, Jr., of the Cumberland police force, beat the rest of the pack to the post.

When Shober dons his hunting coat around Sept. 15 to inaugurate the squirrel hunting season, he will have License No. 1 sewed on his back. The No. 1 state license went to J. Stambert Roland, of Flintstone.

According to Clerk of Courts Robert Jackson, Allegany county last year sold 1,000 more licenses than ever before, bringing the total for the year to 5,600. About 1,000 state-wide licenses were sold last year.

County licenses will cost $1.25 this year and can be obtained only by county residents, unless non-residents own $500 worth of property in the county. If not, a non-resident's license costs $15.50. State-wide licenses will cost $5.25.

According to Jackson, the new hunting laws have not as yet been received at the Court House. Some minor changes are contemplated in the code.

FAIR GOING

By DIONIS GEPPERT

Of the foreign participants in the New York World's fair, there are sixty governments and international bodies and thirty-three American states and territories represented. Foreign governments alone are spending $35,000,000 in buildings and exhibits.

The Court of Peace faces the Lagoon of Nations and is flanked on each side by the Hall of Nations where are represented thirty-six nations plus the Pan-American Union.

Situated at the extreme end of the Court of Peace is the United States Federal Building. The aim of the exhibit of this building is to show the work of the government to provide for the well-being and progress of its people. Murals by Savage revolve downward from the ceiling showing the nation's rise, problems and aspirations. There is a motion picture theater which presents a feature length film titled "These United States." The inner courtyard is shaded by seven forty-foot elms and contains a beautiful garden of flowers.

Art and Industry

Many nations represented in the Hall of Nations have their own pavilions, which contain large exhibits of the art and industry of their country in addition to restaurants where their national food is served. Naturally these restaurants are quite expensive due to the imported food. The air-conditioned restaurant of the Danish pavilion is known for its excellent Danish food and imported beer; and of course not omitting their world famous butter.

Of these pavilions, one of the most outstanding is the Soviet Russia building, built of marble. Mounted upon a tall shaft of red marble (which is to be returned to Russia, block by block) the statue bears a red illuminated star of rubies said to be worth a great sum. The building is very impressive. The long marble steps lead us up into the building where we see quite a display of murals and sculpture plus many maps and exhibits showing the life and work of the 170 million people of the first Socialist country. Handicrafts for which this country is famous are exhibited and especial note is made of the beautiful embroidery work of the gowns and peasant blouses.

Impressive Cascade

The building titled "Italia" is very impressive with its cascade of water falling down the facade from a point 200 feet high at the foot of the classical statue, Roma. This is a three-story building and contains in its halls beautiful work in sculpture plus many paintings. There is of course a large Italian restaurant and a fashion show can be seen on the lower floor where are also found displays of many manufacturers gowns, accessories, and the like. On the main floor is found a model building of the new railroad terminal at Rome, which is quite interesting. Below on the second level are gift counters where many interesting hand-made Italian novelties are sold. It is fun to stop at the entrance on your way out and watch the curtain of water fall, looking through a tall glass window over which the cascade drops, dashing itno the pool below.

The French pavilion is a beautiful place with its restaurant on the terrace overlooking the Lagoon. The first floor is dedicated to the scenic beauties of France; the mezzanine is devoted to Art and Industries; and the second floor is a display of "French Thought," representing literature, philosophy, education and music.

Like Ancient Shrine

Every pavilion holds interesting displays of the country represented and of the few mentioned, the buildings and exhibits are especially outstanding. The Romanian building is an attractive structure and its display of handicraft is very interesting. A few of the pavilions are located in other Zones, i. e., Turkish and Sweeden Square, on Market street. The Belgium pavilion has a 155 foot tower of grey slate crowned by a carillon of thirty-six bronze bells, tuned by the master Jef Dedyn. This tower is one of the few foreign pieces to be left in this country permanently.

The Court of States holds twenty-two state buildings plus the Puerto Rico building Some of the states are not represented as yet, as all of the exhibits are not open. Such is the case with our state of Maryland. In the Court of States is found an interesting replica of an old New England wharf. Also we find the Pennsylvania building is an exact model of Independence Hall with its Liberty Bell reproduced in the center of the tower entrance.

Focal Exhibit

The Medical and Public Health building is the focal exhibit of the Government zone. It is divided into two sections: The Hall of Man and the Hall of Medical Science. A gigantic model of man whose heart shines red with a bounding heart beat appears as you enter the Hall of Man. Here are inscribed the words of St. Augustine which signifies the theme of the focal exhibit:

"Man
Wonders over the restless sea
The flowing water
The sight of the sky
And forgets that of all
Wonders Man himself is
The most wonderful."

In this hall are many displays of the birth and growth of man. There is a transparent man which shows the twenty main organs of the human body. In the Hall of Medical Science there are many charts showing the rating of various diseases and the progress made in these fields by medical science.

Physicians Laud Noble Profession Of Modern Nurse

Convention Delegates Urged To Organize For More Education

Continuing advancement was urged upon more than 300 "women in white" by physicians last night as three state-wide nurses' groups opened a two-day conference here.

"You can't stand still," Dr. Arthur H. Hawkins, veteran Cumberland surgeon, told the nurses, heartily endorsing a suggestion made Dr. Dan Fisher, of the State Department of Health.

Dr. Fisher, who preceded Dr. Hawkins on the program held at Carroll Hall, recommended formation of local nurses' organizations to insure cooperative advancement. Dr. Fisher stressed the value of forums, lectures, demonstrations, and other activities which such a setup would make possible.

His recommendation was applauded by Dr. Hawkins, who suggested that the nurses form county organizations similar to the medical associations.

More Education Demanded

The demands of modern nursing make it "absolutely necessary" for nurses to continue their education even after they receive their diplomas, the doctors declared.

The woman in white—members of the Maryland State Nurses Association, the Maryland League of nursing Education, and the Maryland State Organization for Public Health and Industrial Nursing—also heard themselves praised as "invaluable assistants" to the medical profession.

Dr. Hawkins, lauding their "noble profession," asserted that medical science "could not have progressed without them."

Urging them to be "sympathetic" as well as efficient, he told them that they had a grave responsibility as the "intermediary between the physician and the patient."

Stresses Recent Progress

The surgeon stressed the great forward strides made here since he began practicing medicine in 1901.

"The Western Maryland hospital was little more than a shack then," he recalled. "Few of the nurses could speak correct English, spell, or write.

There were no particular education requirements back in those days," he said.

Despite their lack of formal education, many of these nurses were real assets to the community, he declared, because they were "in earnest" and had a real desire to serve.

Dr. Hawkins enlivened his address with anecdotes concerning incidents in the operating room.

He, as well as the other speakers, received a hearty ovation from the audience.

Dr. Koon Gives Welcome

The nurses were welcomed to the city by Dr. Thomas W. Koon—as mayor, physician, and head of the city health department. He, like the other speakers, praised them for their service and reminded them that theirs was a noble calling with a great tradition—from Florence Nightingale to the present.

Harvey Weiss, superintendent of Memorial hospital, presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers. He also presented Miss Maud M. Gardner, president of the Maryland State Nurse Association, who spoke briefly, taking occasion to praise the Fort Hill band, which under the direction of Victor H. Baumann, played several selections at the opening of the session.

The Maryland association had opened its session in the afternoon with a meeting at City Hall at which Regina M. Donahue, state chairman of the private duty section, presided.

Baltimore Nurses Speak

Speakers included Alma E. Gault, superintendent of nurses, Union Memorial hospital, Baltimore; Lillian P. Sewell, superintendent of nurses, Maryland General hospital, Baltimore; Estelle B. McLeod, hourly nurse, Central Director of Registered Nurses, Baltimore; and Anne D. Zerhusen, anesthetist, Bronchoscopic clinic, Mercy hospital, Baltimore.

The Maryland League will meet at 9:30 a. m. today at the assembly room at Memorial hospital, where Marian E. Thuma, assistant superintendent of nurses, Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, will preside. Angela M. Shipley, education director of the Maryland State Board of Examiners of Nurses will extend a welcome to the group.

Demonstrations Today

Demonstrations under the direction of Mildred Constantine, superintendent of nurses, Memorial hospital, will be given with Allegany and Memorial nurses taking part.

Luncheon will be served at noon at the Central Y. M. C. A. and at 2 p. m. the public health group will meet at City Hall. Bessie Lee Maston will preside.

Speakers will be Eleanor M. Immler, supervisor, Babies Milk Fund Association, Baltimore; Lilly T. Harman, supervising nurse, Eastern Health District, Baltimore; and Elizabeth Ferguson, former nurse-midwife, Charles county.

Doctors To Give Tea

The Allegany-Garrett County Medical Society will give a tea at the Cumberland Country Club at 4 p. m. At 8 p. m. dinner will be served at the Shrine Country Club, with Maud M. Gardner, president of the Maryland State Nurses Association, presiding.

Virginia K. Betzold, director, principles and practice of nursing, Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, and Helen Gassaway, chairman state committee, Red Cross Nursing Service, will speak.

Mrs. Howard L. Tolson will be chairman of Saturday's tea at the Country club, and Miss Grace Weber will have charge of the dinner at the Shrine club.

The committee assisting Mrs. Tolson is Mrs. H. W. Robinson, Mrs. W. R. Hodges Sr., Mrs. A. H. Hawkins, Mrs. Knight Reynolds, and Mrs. H. B. Marley. Nurses from the local hospitals will also assist.

Conventioning Nurses Are Early To Rise

Cumberland has seen many conventions, but never before one where the delegates get up for a "breakfast session" at 7:30 a. m.

Yet that is what the members of the Maryland State Organization for Public Health and Industrial Nursing proposed to do today.

Unable to work their own meeting into the crowded convention schedule at any other time, they decided to talk over their problems at breakfast at the Golden Gate Tea Room at an hour when most conventions would just be settling down for a bit of sleep.

Seasoned observers of conventions said last night that this nurses gathering seemed to be the most serious, hardest-working one of all.

Beer License Fees Bring in $3,773

Revenue from 272 alcoholic beverage licenses in Allegany county for the month of May amounted to $3,773, of which sum the county received $590, it was reported yesterday by R. Mason Hill, in the county commissioners' office.

The sum received by the county represents the amount paid by beer dispensers in unincorporated districts of the county. Incorporated towns received the following amounts: Cumberland, $2,399; Midland, $98; Lonaconing, $245; Frostburg, $343; and Westernport, $98.

The 272 dealers who paid these license fees are not to be confused with the 52 concerns in the county which now have licenses to sell hard liquor, it was explained yesterday. According to law, Allegany county is only allowed 52 such licenses at the present time. One liquor license is allowed for every 1,500 people in a county.

The plans were made Thursday night at a meeting at the SS. Peter and Paul School at which Joseph F. Lewis, representative on the archdiocesan board of veterans, presided.

The following committe was appointed from this district for the national conventian: registration, Edwin Raphel; program, Kathryn F. Doerner; publicity, Thekla D. Price.

County Appoints New Constables

First Trial Magistrate Takes Oath of Office

Keeping step with the new magistrate's law which is now effective in Maryland, Clerk of Courts Robert Jackson yesterday swore in the first magistrate to qualify under the new law, and the county commissioners appointed ten constables.

Owen L. Porter of Frostburg, having qualified as a trial magistrate, yesterday posted a $5,000 bond and has the distinction of being the first magistrate in the county to take the oath from Clerk Jackson under the new law.

Raising his right hand, Porter took the oath stating that "I do swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States and that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to the State of Maryland and support the constitution and laws thereof, and that I will to the best of my skill and judgment, diligently and faithfully, without partiality or prejudice, execute the office of Justice of the Peace for Allegany county according to the constitution and laws of the state."

Although all except two of ten constables had been appointed prior to yesterday, the county commissioners reappointed the original eight and added two new constables at their regular Friday morning session.

Constables reappointed according to the terms of the new magistrate's law were Florian Wilson, Westernport; Matthew Muir, Lonaconing; Charles E. Robertson, Midland; Denzil Crowe, Frostburg; John W. Albright, Mt. Savage; James Jones, Cresaptown; Harold V. Bloom, Cumberland, and Walter Howser, Cumberland.

The two new appointments made yesterday were Harry Bailey, who will serve as constable in Barton, and Thomas Nash, who was appointed for McCoole.

With the constables appointed, all that remains to be done to carry out the provisions of the magistrate's law is qualifying nine more magistrates in Allegany county, Court House attaches said yesterday.

Players To Meet

A business meeting and rehearsal of the Gilbert and Sullivan Players will be held Monday evening at the Girl Scout headquarters on Greene street, it was announced yesterday.

Ex-Convict Takes Police Grilling Without Cracking

Smiles at Questions About Va. Robbery, Asks for Cigarette

A sardonic Cumberland man with a tattoo of a nude lady displayed prominently on his left forearm yesterday refused to crack under questioning by police who suspect him of being implicated in a Virginia armed robbery two weeks ago.

Picked up shortly after the arrest of Fred Iser, of Wiley Ford, who was charged with the possession of stolen property, Louis Piper, 24, smiled cynically at the queries of local officers and by way of reply asked for a cigarette.

Piper, who served two stretches in the penitentiary, told the officers in a slow drawl that his stomach "just couldn't stand another long stretch in the penitentiary."

He was picked up yesterday by Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe, County Investigator Terrance J. Boyle and Chief-of-Police C. V. Barncord, of Ridgeley, following Barncord's arrest of Iser.

Prisoner Won't Talk

When officers tried to pick the truth out of the deliberate Piper, they bumped into the code of the men who have served time behind prison bars. When told that Iser had implicated him in the stickup and robbery of a Virginia man, Piper refused to believe it, but added that he would "tell enough on that guy so that he would still be in jail when his children were 102, if he spilled anything on me."

Caught In Remote Home

Piper was taken into custody in a home in a remote section near Oldtown. Directed by a farmer, the officers surrounded the farmhouse upon arrival.

Piper, who was found inside, remarked that "I saw you guys coming when you were just starting down that hill yonder," indicating that he could have easily eluded their trap if he had cared to do so.

Although officers haven't proved anything on him as yet, they are of the belief that Piper was the man who aided Iser in robbing Robert P. Miller, of Lovettsville, Va., two weeks ago.

Thursday, Miller arrived in Ridgeley to identify Iser as one of the hitch hikers who pitched him out of his car after robbing him of his money and watch at gunpoint.

Unless the taciturn Piper chooses to talk, officers will probably recall Miller to take a look at their second suspect.

WPA Worker To Face Federal Grand Jury

Olin E. Broadwater, 22-year-old WPA worker, will be taken to Baltimore next week to face a federal grand jury.

He pleaded guilty to charges of stealing and forging a friend's WPA check when arraigned here before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett.

Broadwater, who lives near Bittinger, was arrested by U. S. Secret Service Agent James H. Dickerson, U. S. Deputy Marshal Howard P. Loughrie, and Garrett County Deputy Sheriff Spear. He was accused of stealing and forging a $15.84 check belonging to Glen T. Murphy, of RFD 2, Swanton, with whom he rode to work each day.

He told officers, "I don't know why I did it".

Crash Victim Better

Earl G. Young, 18, of 731 Columbia avenue, who was injured in an automobile mishap May 19 on the Oldtown Road near North Branch, was reported in a "good" condition last night at Memorial hospital. His left arm was amputated.

—The 1894 "S" mint dime and the 1913 Liberty Head nickel are two of the modern U. S. coins for which large sums are offered by numismatic companies.

Publicity Broadside Opens Fight To Get More Tourists on Route 40

The publicity guns which will advertise the National Highway to America's millions of tourists are already booming.

Celluloid badges boosting Route 40 are being distributed to filling station attendants, waitresses, and other persons who meet the traveling public.

Placards announcing membership in the National Highway U. S. 40 Association are appearing in establishments which have kicked in their share to the publicity kitty.

Now the reams of publicity are beginning to flow into the offices of newspapers and other disseminators of such home-town propaganda.

First publicity broadside from the association, of which Harry Manley, of Cumberland, is president, reveals the more or less startling information that the first iron bridge built in America is still in use on U. S. 40.

Historic Papers Free

In a quick follow-up, the association promises to send to anyone interested a fascimile of the Virginia Gazette, published in Williamsburg, Va., July 19, 1754, which carried George Washington's own official report of the battle of Fort Necessity.

It was in all probability the first newspaper dispatch sent out of these mountains. A copy of this rare and ancient paper was unearthed in London after a search of many months, and the fascimilies were prepared from it.

Persons desiring this fascimile can obtain it by dropping a postcard or letter to the National Highway U. S. 40 Association, Uniontown, Pa.

Before long, too, the association will have plenty of free copies available of a handsome little booklet outlining the history of Route 40 between St. Louis and Baltimore.

Oldest Iron Bridge Described

Now more about the oldest iron bridge in America. It is an 80-foot, single arch span crossing Dunlap's creek in Brownsville, Pa., and was completed on July 4, 1839, just 100 years ago.

The total cost of this bridge was $39,901.63, including a coat of gas tar and three coats of white lead paint; and today, after generations of rattling horse-drawn traffic, the bridge bears a steady stream of freight trucks, busses, and speeding passenger cars such as its builders never dreamed of.

The bridge was designed and erected by a Captain Richard Delafield, of the United States Army Engineers Corps, who later became superintendent of West Point and finally the army's chief engineer. His chief assistant was Lieutenant G. W. Cass, who later became president of the Northern Pacific railroad.

Attendance Champs Get Their Bit of Glory

Attendance champions were honored at Allegany high school assembly yesterday along with athletes and other senior leaders.

The mythical attendance crowns went to Josephine Compton and Franklin McIlwe, who have not missed a minute of school during four years, Principal Ralph R. Webster announced.

It was also announced that Geneva Lewis and Russell Harper missed but half a day; John Snyder, Charles Kreitzburg and William Burger, only one day; and John Miller only a day and a half.

Pastor Testifies For Crash Driver

'Made Quick Decision' Minister Tells Court

The Rev. Alfred E. Holst yesterday testified in Trial Magistrates court in behalf of the driver who crashed into the minister's car in LaVale and caused it to ram into a pole.

The driver on trial, Harry Gomer, of Frostburg, was found guilty of reckless driving, but was fined only $1 and costs.

The minister testified that a car stopped in front of Gomer, and that Gomer swung around it, colliding with the minister's car, which was coming from the opposite direction.

"A quick decision was needed," the preacher testified. "It was Gomer's misfortune that he made the wrong decision." Mr. Holst is pastor of the Seventh Day Adventist church.

Court Kept Busy

Trying traffic cases in Police and Trial Magistrates courts kept Magistrate Frank A. Perdew doubly busy yesterday.

Boyd Davis, of 479 Baltimore avenue, and Ellis Crawford, of Cresaptown, were each fined $1 in Police Court for careless driving. They were arrested Thursday afternoon following a collision at Market and Johnson streets.

James Logeston, of Flintstone, was acquitted of careless driving, while John W. Shea, of Frostburg, was fined $1 on the same charge.

In Magistrates Court, Orlando Massi, of Thomas, W. Va., forfeited $11.45 bond for reckless driving on the McMullen Highway. Charges were preferred by State Trooper George J. Miller.

One Guilty, One Freed

Apprehended after their machines collided on the Mt. Savage Road, Henry J. Getson, of Corriganville, was fined $1 and costs for reckless driving, and Harry E. Wolford, of 308 Mechanic street, was found not guilty. State Trooper Carl G. Storm made the arrests.

Bernard D. Clayton, of 879 Patterson avenue, picked up by Trooper Storm, was fined $10 and costs for speeding on the McMullen Highway. Joseph H. Stitcher, of 603 Shriver avenue, forfeited $5.75 bond for passing an automobile on the Mt. Savage Road when the way ahead was not clear.

President Lewis, of Harpster, Ohio, will address the Cumberland chapter and will also introduce J. Alexis Shriver, of the Maryland Historical Society.

Commenting on the work of the organization, President Lewis stated recently, "after twenty years in the accumulation of numerous details and verification of names, dates and service of our ancestors, we are in a position to submit in printed form for permanent record, conclusive proofs of their contribution to our country when bravery and sacrifice was most needed."

New Hunting Licenses Go on Sale; Cumberland Policeman Gets No. 1

The new hunting licenses are now on sale at the Clerk of Courts office in the Court House, and hunters who always relish the thought of grabbing that desirable No. 1 license are already out of luck.

Many of the 5,600 some hunters in Allegany county like to grab off the low numbers, but this year, Frank A. Shober, Jr., of the Cumberland police force, beat the rest of the pack to the post.

When Shober dons his hunting coat around Sept. 15 to inaugurate the squirrel hunting season, he will have License No. 1 sewed on his back. The No. 1 state license went to J. Stambert Roland, of Flintstone.

According to Clerk of Courts Robert Jackson, Allegany county last year sold 1,000 more licenses than ever before, bringing the total for the year to 5,600. About 1,000 state-wide licenses were sold last year.

County licenses will cost $1.25 this year and can be obtained only by county residents, unless non-residents own $500 worth of property in the county. If not, a non-resident's license costs $15.50. State-wide licenses will cost $5.25.

According to Jackson, the new hunting laws have not as yet been received at the Court House. Some minor changes are contemplated in the code.

FAIR GOING

By DIONIS GEPPERT

Of the foreign participants in the New York World's fair, there are sixty governments and international bodies and thirty-three American states and territories represented. Foreign governments alone are spending $35,000,000 in buildings and exhibits.

The Court of Peace faces the Lagoon of Nations and is flanked on each side by the Hall of Nations where are represented thirty-six nations plus the Pan-American Union.

Situated at the extreme end of the Court of Peace is the United States Federal Building. The aim of the exhibit of this building is to show the work of the government to provide for the well-being and progress of its people. Murals by Savage revolve downward from the ceiling showing the nation's rise, problems and aspirations. There is a motion picture theater which presents a feature length film titled "These United States." The inner courtyard is shaded by seven forty-foot elms and contains a beautiful garden of flowers.

Art and Industry

Many nations represented in the Hall of Nations have their own pavilions, which contain large exhibits of the art and industry of their country in addition to restaurants where their national food is served. Naturally these restaurants are quite expensive due to the imported food. The air-conditioned restaurant of the Danish pavilion is known for its excellent Danish food and imported beer; and of course not omitting their world famous butter.

Of these pavilions, one of the most outstanding is the Soviet Russia building, built of marble. Mounted upon a tall shaft of red marble (which is to be returned to Russia, block by block) the statue bears a red illuminated star of rubies said to be worth a great sum. The building is very impressive. The long marble steps lead us up into the building where we see quite a display of murals and sculpture plus many maps and exhibits showing the life and work of the 170 million people of the first Socialist country. Handicrafts for which this country is famous are exhibited and especial note is made of the beautiful embroidery work of the gowns and peasant blouses.

Impressive Cascade

The building titled "Italia" is very impressive with its cascade of water falling down the facade from a point 200 feet high at the foot of the classical statue, Roma. This is a three-story building and contains in its halls beautiful work in sculpture plus many paintings. There is of course a large Italian restaurant and a fashion show can be seen on the lower floor where are also found displays of many manufacturers gowns, accessories, and the like. On the main floor is found a model building of the new railroad terminal at Rome, which is quite interesting. Below on the second level are gift counters where many interesting hand-made Italian novelties are sold. It is fun to stop at the entrance on your way out and watch the curtain of water fall, looking through a tall glass window over which the cascade drops, dashing itno the pool below.

The French pavilion is a beautiful place with its restaurant on the terrace overlooking the Lagoon. The first floor is dedicated to the scenic beauties of France; the mezzanine is devoted to Art and Industries; and the second floor is a display of "French Thought." representing literature, philosophy, education and music.

Like Ancient Shrine

The Japanese pavilion is especially beautiful, modeled after an ancient Shinto shrine. There is a replica of the Liberty Bell made of Japanese cultured pearls worth a fortune. Colorfully clad Japanese girls explain the various exhibits.

Every pavilion holds interesting displays of the country represented and of the few mentioned, the buildings and exhibits are especially outstanding. The Romanian building is an attractive structure and its display of handicraft is very interesting. A few of the pavilions are located in other Zones, i. e., Turkish and Sweeden Square, on Market street. The Belgium pavilion has a 155 foot tower of grey slate crowned by a carillon of thirty-six bronze bells, tuned by the master Jef Dedyn. This tower is one of the few foreign pieces to be left in this country permanently.

The Court of States holds twenty-two state buildings plus the Puerto Rico building Some of the states are not represented as yet, as all of the exhibits are not open. Such is the case with our state of Maryland. In the Court of States is found an interesting replica of an old New England wharf. Also we find the Pennsylvania building is an exact model of Independence Hall with its Liberty Bell reproduced in the center of the tower entrance.

Focal Exhibit

The Medical and Public Health building is the focal exhibit of the Government zone. It is divided into two sections: The Hall of Man and the Hall of Medical Science. A gigantic model of man whose heart shines red with a bounding heart beat appears as you enter the Hall of Man. Here are inscribed the words of St. Augustine which signifies the theme of the focal exhibit:

"Man
Wonders over the restless sea
The flowing water
The sight of the sky
And forgets that of all
Wonders Man himself is
The most wonderful."

In this hall are many displays of the birth and growth of man. There is a transparent man which shows the twenty main organs of the human body. In the Hall of Medical Science there are many charts showing the rating of various diseases and the progress made in these fields by medical science.

Allegany Seniors Sing Farewell

Letters Given Out To Student Leaders

Allegany high school seniors participated in their last student assembly yesterday.

Committee Set On Putting Over Nursery Drive

New Support Enlisted In Funds Campaign To Continue Program

Cumberland kids requiring the aid of the Keating Memorial Day Nursery are going to get it, a determined representative committee emphatically declared last night as they set the goal of their drive for the nursery at $3000.

Bolstered by the appearance of Mrs. Morris Rosenbaum, whose annual cancer clinic bazaars are traditional in Cumberland, the drive committee last night whipped up the most enthusiasm to date as General Chairman Lawrence P. Flynn enumerated final details of the campaign scheduled to start on June 11.

100 Youngsters Cared For

Judging from last night's meeting of the committee at the Windsor Hotel, Sisters Agnes, Charitina and Rosamond, of the Sisters of Charity, are destined to continue their job of caring for some 100 needy youngsters every day.

But the committee vigorously pointed out last night that unless Cumberland shows its big heart the important welfare organization may be obliged to suspend operations. The nursery's state contribution for the coming year has received a drastic cut.

Aware of this situation, a host of leading Cumberland citizens last night had demonstrated their interest in the continuance of the nursery and had assured the large commitee that they could be depended on to go to bat for the organization when the drive is officially launched.

Committee Named

The executive committee composed of Flynn, Peter J. Decker, secretary, and Harry Williams, treasurer, is augmented by Miss Betty Smith, of the Shamrock Club, chairman of the dance committee; Mrs. John R. Reed, chairman of the sub-committee in charge of tag day; Commissioner Thomas F. Conlon, in charge of placing 200 coin containers throughout the city; Carl B. Sherred, in charge of theatre collections and advertising; Thomas K. Whalley, in charge of Veterans of Foreign Wars participation; Attorney General William C. Walsh, chairman of the speakers committee; Leslie H. Abrams, of the American Legion, in charge of special attractions; Commissioner William J. Edwards, in charge of publicity; and Donald Smith, John B. Mordock and M. L. Lazarus, of the Retail Merchants Association in charge of window displays and tag day.

Radio Talks Scheduled

According to present plans, a radio campaign will be launched by Mr. Walsh and Mayor Thomas W. Koon. The campaign calls for talks twice a day at 2:15 p. m. featuring representatives of various auxiliary organizations throughout the city, and at 6:25 p. m., when leading citizens and members of the committee will give talks.

New backers of the drive who appeared at last night's meeting at the Windsor included Mrs. Rosenbaum, Joseph P. Schellhase, F. H. Rockwell, Frank B. Vandegrift, Wesley H. Abrams, Miss Katherine M. Moore, Peter J. Decker, Mayme Spearman, Stanley Fields, Camilla Snyder, and Grace Auman.

To Put Out Coin Boxes

Commissioner Conlon announced last night that members of the committee who will help him in placing coin containers throughout the city will be Charles L. George, Commissioner Edwards, Felix Bradley, William A. Ryland, William L. Wilson, George Garlitz, and Joe Schellhaus.

According to Miss Betty Smith, the date of the Shamrock club dance has been set for June 2. It will be held at Crystal Park. Tag day will be held on June 10. The coin containers and theatre program will be from June 11 to June 17. A boxing card at Community Park on Monday will provide an attraction for sport followers, with ten per cent of the gross receipts going to the nursery fund.

Seek Board's Approval For New Highway

A road project for the approval of the County Commissioners today had been presented to the board by Henry E. Tarring, Jr., WPA engineer.

A new road will be constructed from the High Germany road, at Little Orleans, near the site of the former CCC camp, to a bridge recently constructed at the Washington county line at Sideling Hill.

This new road will be known as the Ziegler road and will connect the Orleans district from the river area with the National Highway. A macadam road will be built, chipped and oiled, for a distance of two miles.

Woman's Sole Survivor Found Month Too Late

Efforts to locate the sole survivor of Mrs. Berta Slezak, who died May 26 at her home at 237 Henderson boulevard, had been dropped today when her son, Rudolph Kraul, suddenly turned up.

In her will filed today, it was revealed that Mrs. Slezak left her only son her entire estate with the exception of $200 which she willed to William R. Zimerla. Kraul, who now lives in Washington, D. C., could not be located for his mother's funeral last month.
